A Tough CROWD

Every day 2,617 students come from three different towns, crowding the hallways to maximum capacity. With over thirty students per classroom, times can become frustrating and nerve-racking. Even the easy task of walking to a class or locker can become a life and death situation. Irrate students crowd the cafeteria to wait in line for twenty minutes to purchase something as simple as a bagel. Those that drive to school are forced to deal with a parking lot that accommodates less than half the student population.

Although many students shy away from the idea of being a part of such a large school, few would trade it for anything because a big population gives them big opportunities. Along with the occasionally overwhelming experiences encountered each year, come three times the friends, three times the excitement, and three times the challenge. Three diverse towns come together to form a high school unlike any other.

The benefit of having high numbers is being able to put out high numbers, like collecting 111,890 cans for the food drive, sending over 165,000 note cards with “the phrase that pays” to Brooke and Jill’s Pep Rally contest, accumulating one million pop tabs for Riley’s Children’s Hospital, and producing five National Merit Semifinalists when most schools are lucky to have one. Year round, students work together and contend with crowded schedules to make these achievements a reality.

Although students may sometimes feel like the number off their ID card, they are still able to find their own niche in this massive in crowd. So they deal with crowded classrooms, lunchrooms, and parking lots, because this crowding is what makes LC unique. Though two may be company, who at Lake Central would want company when...

Randy Hartog (12) shows his true school spirit during the Homecoming football game against East Chicago Central.

Take a moment to think back to the last time you walked the halls of Lake Central. What did you see? You probably encountered a vast sea of different faces, grade levels, and experiences. You probably waved to friends, swerved around packs of chatting students, and bumped into at least one person you'd never seen before in your entire life.

Now take a moment to consider the people you just ran into. You've probably never given much thought to the various crowds you see day after day, but they all contribute to the spirit of the school. Students here come from three different towns and a multitude of different backgrounds, and they all search for ways to make themselves unique.

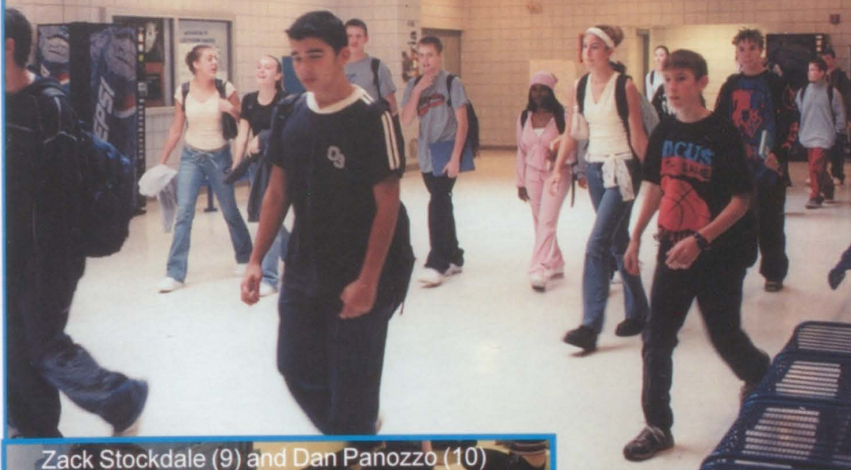

Though no two people are alike, we are all united by a common bond: the high school experience. We all look forward to dances like Winter Formal and Prom. We've all pulled at least one all-nighter right before a major test or paper. We are all subjected to the cramped horror that is Lower E hall.

Students here are fiercely independent, and all search for ways to personalize their high school years. Throughout this pursuit of self-determination, certain events and academic experiences are shared by all, and the students become part of a larger whole. We are all different; we are all similar; we are all one in crowd.

Bermuda Triangle

Students find fun in and out of Tri-Town area

As students waited patiently for the last bell of the school year to ring, all they could think about was the cool water of Lake Michigan and the hot sun beating down on them. While most teenagers were making summer plans, freshmen were buying school supplies and dreading the sound of their alarms for summer school.

Did students really spend all their time at the Dunes, rolling around in the sand? Not all students had the luxury to lie out on the beach; some were stuck traveling around the Tri-Town area, while others were traveling all over the country for sporting events. Yvette Tovar (12) said, "All I did this summer was travel around the Untied States to play softball, but I have to say my favorite place I went to was Colorado."

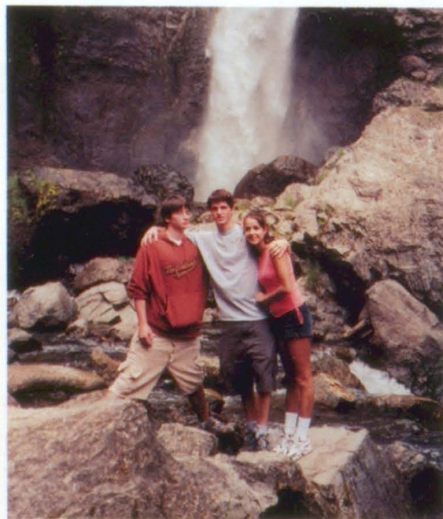

While some students were trapped in the Tri-Town area, others were exploring different topical paradises. Many students traveled to Mexico for a week or even spent the entire summer there with their families. Stephan Cook (10) said, "I had the best time in Mexico. I snorkeled and parasailed over the ocean. It was the best vacation I ever went on."

While some people would rather go to the beach, others would rather go see their favorite band in concert. Some people went to see more popular acts like Britney Spears and N'sync, while others enjoyed listening to local bands like Immortality and Josh Holmes Band. Jamie Porzuczek (11) attended the Weezer concert over the summer. She said that Weezer was awesome live, and she would love to see them again in concert.

Senior Alan Gross said, "All during my summer break I spent most of my time making blizzards at Dairy Queen." Whether they mixed milkshakes at Dairy Queen or bagged groceries at Stracks, many students spent their time working hard to make a little bit of money.

While spending summer vacation working hard, playing sports or going on a tropical getaway, students found their own ways to have fun in the sun and forget all their worries about school.

"This summer I had a lot of pool parties at my house. We swam, listened to music, and had so much fun. I invited all of my friends to the pool parties." Matt Stelmaszek (9).

"This summer I did a lot of traveling. I went to St. Petersburg, FL, to visit my aunt. I laid out and just relaxed. Then I went to Oregon for my cousin's wedding, which was a lot of fun. This summer was really great." Ashley Johnston (10).

"Over the summer, I went to Michigan to vacation at my beach house. It was a lot of fun. Me and my family went tubing and swam in the Lake Michigan. I also got a new Mustang this summer, which was very sweet." Mike Bohn (11)

"I went on a road trip to Cedar Point with my good friend Kari Duncan. We had to beg our parents to let us go, and I am so glad they let us. We went on all rides and got a hotel room to stay in. It was the best trip I ever went on." Lauren Kucera (12)

Three Times The Spirit SPIRIT SPIRIT SPIRIT

As the football team prepared for the Homecoming game on Friday night, the rest of the school displayed their spirit throughout the week.

Monday was an extension of the weekend, as students filed in wearing their pajamas. Many students participated in Pajama Day because it involved the least amount of effort out of all five spirit days. "I really liked Pajama Day because it was the most comfortable day," said Jackie Grantham (12).

Students sported their college wear on Tuesday. Walking into a class with an IU atmosphere and wearing a Purdue sweatshirt was not a pleasant experience.

Students who dressed for Wacky Day on Wednesday got their fair share of looks as they walked through the halls. Mismatched outfits, crazy hair, and boas were just some of the attire seen on Wacky Day.

On Thursday's Tourist Day, most students wore Hawaiian styled shirts and even cameras as accessories.

On the day of the big game, students covered themselves with blue and white from head to toe. Some students chose not to wear blue and white for Spirit Day, but instead dressed as our mascot, an Indian, to show their support for them.

After the parade on Thursday night, students gathered at Redar Park for the annual pep rally. Lasting only 20 minutes, the pep rally included the announcement of starters on the football team, a tug-of-war between the offense and defense, and a pie-eating contest that quickly changed to a food fight, thanks to Brian Sheffel (12). "It was rainy and a lot of people didn't show up, but the pie eating contest turned into total chaos when people started throwing pies at each other," said Michael Gallagher (11), who was in charge of the parade and pep rally.

The pep rally was an exciting activity to get students pumped for the big game. "I think that the pep rally was fun," said Student Council secretary Ashley Gulden (12). "We had a good turnout with good participation. Hopefully it will be a success again next year."

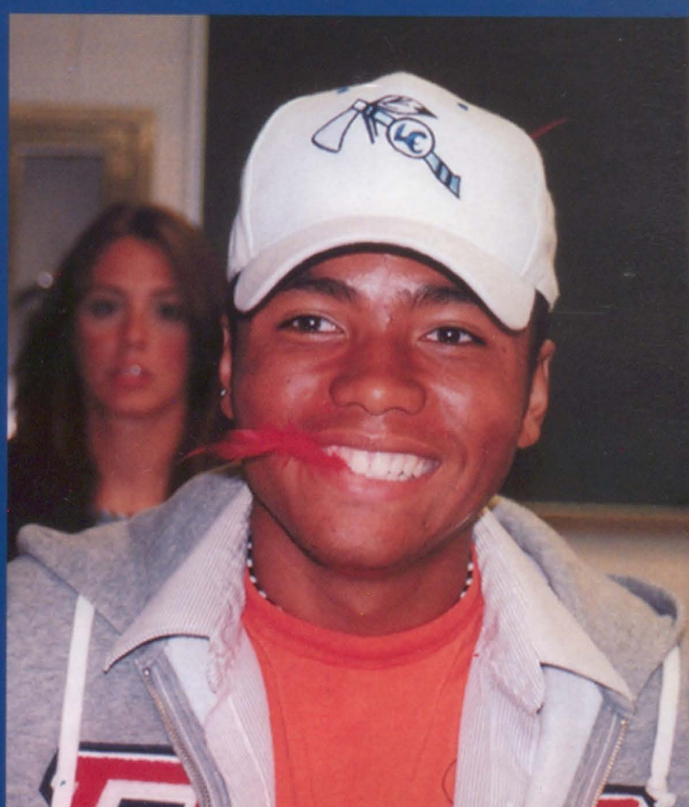

Spirit Week helped bring out the originality and creativity in students. At the beginning of the week, students were more relaxed with both their clothes and spirit because of Pajama Day and College Day, but as the week went on, students got wackier by the day.

Despite the shortness of the rally, students had fun supporting the team with activities Student Council had set up. Everyone enjoyed showing off their school spirit. Spread by Allison Dunbar and Denise Kolanczyk.

Superfans gather in the parking lot to enjoy the tailgating party. Many students showed up before the game to partake in the festivities, which included touch football and plenty of food.

SPRITSPIRIT Three Times the Party SPIRITSPIRIT

The screaming sirens of fire engines, the throwing of candy and the cheering of proud LC fans made up the festivities at this year's annual Homecoming parade. Fans came from all over the Tri-Town area and gathered together to support their Indians. Enthusiasm and excitement filled the air as several decorated floats paraded past. "The floats were all really good looking," said freshman Ryan Micheals. "You can tell they spent a lot of time doing them. I especially liked the Seniors' float. Their theme was really cool." LC teachers judged the floats in a decoration contest. The senior class cabinet's hard work and determination paid off, and they won the contest with their "Little Italy" float. The floats were full of proud LC athletes and students whose contagious school spirit was quickly caught by the spectators.

Proud to represent their team, the athletes cheered down the parade route as the cheerleaders did what they do best pumped up the crowd. The Tribe of Pride marched past playing the fight song as loud as they possibly could while the Centralettes performed a flag and weapon routine. The Kahler and Grimmer Middle School bands were also given a time to shine in the big parade.

Helene Buck (12) decorates the National Honor Society float, hoping that the float will look great for an awesome appearance in the parade.

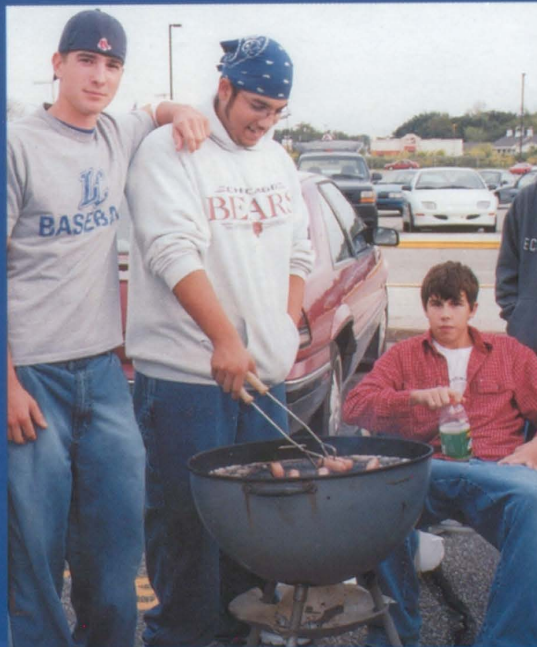

"The parade was full of school spirit and excitement. It was great to see so many people come out and represent our school," said senior Lindsay Frost. All this excitement was just a warm up for the big game the next day.

Before the Homecoming game, students and parents attended tailgating parties. Cars and trucks filed into the parking lot and the smell of barbecue filled the air as the eager fans waited for the gates to open. "A bunch of my friends and I went in three SUVs. We made sandwiches, ate chips, and blasted our music while we sat in the back of our cars. I had a lot of fun and it was a great way to spend our time as we anticipated the game," said junior Shannon Williams.

After all the hot dogs, hamburgers, sub sandwiches, chili, chips and pop, a bunch of the fans, guys and girls, got together for a short fun game of football. Students and even a couple of the parents, ran around the parking lot scoring touchdowns as they pumped up for the game. Before they knew it, their game wound down it was about time for the gates to open and the annual Homecoming game to begin. LC once again showed that they could rally together to show support for our team.

Caging the Cardinals

LC captures a win against East Chicago Central.

razy fans and painted faces made it obvious that Indian fans were expecting a victory, and that is exactly what they got. The jam-packed stands roared with excitement and pride as the Fighting Indians dominated the Burial Grounds on Homecoming Night, shutting down the East Chicago Central Cardinal's offense 22-0. The first home victory of the season couldn't have come on a better night.

"It was a great victory for the team and it helped turn around our season," said Coach Scott Freckleton.

The fans became more and more pumped up and wild with each touchdown scored. On the other side of the field, the Cardinals weren't taking the beating very well so they sent their mascot over to taunt the LC sidelines. He was escorted back to the losing side of the field by Officer Eric Andersen.

Of course this fiasco made the LC stands even more rowdy.

"My friend Luke Triveline tumbled down the stairs after being attacked by a crazy Indian fan," said senior Austin Torres.

Scoring in the first half were Josh Morgan, Andrew Lawrence, Ryan Goodman, and Ron Jankovich. With the end of the first half approaching, the score was 22-0.

Halftime started out with the girls cross country team lapping the football field with their burning torches held high. The school spirit was lifted even higher as the girls set the kerosene-soaked Indian letters on fire. Everyone was anticipating the halftime show with the announcement of the Homecoming court.

It was no surprise when Ashley Ritzema and Josh Doolin, a couple of two years, were crowned king and queen.

"I was very happy to represent the senior class and I was overwhelmed my classmates chose Josh and me," said queen Ashley Ritzema.

Among the other winners were juniors Maureen Bona and Greg Pachacz, sophomores Jessica Segal and Austin Brack, and freshmen Jen Olson and Jason Goins.

The Indians continued to cage the Cardinals in the second half, and although Lake Central didn't score any more touchdowns, EC Central left with no points on the scoreboard.

"It was a good game and both teams played hard. That game was a must-win situation because we wanted to give our fans a Homecoming victory," said cornerback, Nick Boddie, junior. This years homecoming was one that will soon not be forgotten. Spread by Nikki Carmody and Rhonda Hoogewerf

Lost in the moment

Finding your way through the night

Jump in the shower... put makeup on... throw on a dress... pick up friends... don't forget your date... remember the camera... speed to school... make it on time... get down with your bad self...

The theme of this year's Homecoming dance was "Lost in Europe," but everyone was at a loss of ideas of how to dress accordingly. As usual the gym was crowded, full of sweaty dancers, bumping music, and bizarrely dressed guys.

Kenneth McGhee (9) said, "The women were hot. It was entertaining. The pop was flat. People dressed too fancy, Chris Sanders and I were the only ones who dressed ghetto. I wore a Chicago jersey, black and red jeans, and Jordans."

Kenneth's summary describes a typical Homecoming dance at Lake Central in every respect. Every year the guys try to compete against each other to see who can display the most eccentric attire.

"When you were in the middle dancing, you stopped caring what everyone else thought. We were all having so much fun and the body heat was extremely intense," said Beth Warzyniak (10).

With everyone crammed together around the DJ, it was an unforgettable night. In the midst of all the dancing, there was also a mad chase scene.

"It was hilarious when Ryan O'Neill (12) climbed up on the bleachers and was dancing on top of the Eiffel Tower decoration. When the principals finally spotted him, he took off with the cops and everyone else after chasing him," explained Brian Kaluf (11).

After a long night of dancing and waiting in long lines, everyone was just about ready to begin the true highlight of their night.

"I loved the music, there were tons of people dancing and there were not too many slow songs. Just about the only thing that could have made it better would be if it would have been longer," said Marc Kesheimer (12).

Throbbing feet...growling stomachs...grab some grub...chill with friends...no curfew...kick back for the remainder of the night...

Winter Wonderland

Students have fun without the sun

Snow covered trees and Jack Frost nipping at the nose... Here in Northwest Indiana, Old Man Winter made his presence known with single digit temperatures and icy streets, but the harsh weather did not deter LC students from having some good old winter fun. Whether it was snowboarding or skiing at The Pines, making a snowman in the front yard, or having a snowball fight in the parking lot, students made the best of the chilly weather.

One of the best parts of winter is the snow. Students found many uses for the white glow that covers the ground. Although the area did not receive many inches of accumulation of snow, students still discovered a way to have winter fun.

"Over Thanksgiving break, some of my friends and I went up to Boyne Mountain in Michigan to snowboard. The whole weekend was awesome. We snowboarded for hours and hung out in the lodge," said Jack Goldsberry (12).

Some students bundled up, putting on layers of clothing, hats and gloves, and headed to downtown Chicago to enjoy the winter festivities. During Christmas time there are many things to do in the city. People went to State Street to check out the window displays, enjoyed ice skating at Navy Pier, or browsed around the Christkindlemarkt.

"I love going to Chicago during the winter. My friends and I went downtown and walked down the Mag Mile, and then afterwards we watched the fireworks. Even though it was so windy and cold, we had so much fun and the city looked magical," said Stacey Glaser (11).

Some students stayed in the Tri-Town area and hung out with friends. Most students had some good clean fun but others liked to pick on the little ones in the neighborhood.

"I have a lot of the little kids on my block, and when it snows they always build these huge snowmen. At night when they go inside, my friends like to go around and knock them all down. I know it's a little mean, but it's so much fun," said Cory Dills (9).

Whatever the case, students find fun, interesting ways to spend their time in the winter, even though it may feel like it's about forty below outside.

Night to Remember

Students keep valuable memories forever

Winter Formal proved to be a huge success. With around 840 students attending and tickets sold out, students were crowded onto the dance floor. Even though it was crowded, their dancing styles were not cramped.

Winter Formal was held on Saturday, February 1, at the Villa Cesare in Schererville. The parking lot was crowded with many different forms of transportation. Some groups chose to take their own cars while others took the traditional limo or even a party bus. Everyone got to the dance safely and had a blast while doing so.

N-Teens sponsors formal each year. To be on the formal court, one must be a member of N-Teens. Sheri Demy, Lauren Beukema, Amy Wierzbicki, Kyle Ramsy, James Le, and Ryan O'Neill made up the senior court. The junior princess was Laura Salazar and the sophomore princess was Becky Hart. Sheri Demy and Kyle Ramsy were named queen and king.

Formal was a great time to be with friends and have fun. Many students who attended danced the night away and made unforgettable memories that would last long after the last song was played.

"My favorite part of formal was dancing with my friends," said Tiffany Tigie (10).

It was the first chance and an exciting opportunity for sophomores to attend the dance.

"It was my first time going but I definitely want to go again and hopefully it'll be even more fun the next time I go," said Amy Allen (10).

On the other hand, it was the last Winter Formal for the seniors.

"It was fun to share my last formal with all of my friends. I am glad I was able to go," said Lauren Ausmus (12).

All formal-goers, whether it was their first or last time attending, could agree that the music, decorations, and people made the dance a spectacular event.

Students did not stop the fun when the dance ended. A popular activity was going out to dinner. Some went to downtown Chicago while others simply travelled back to a friend's house. No matter what they chose to do, all students had loads of fun.

Friends Forever

We'll Be

"A friend is someone who knows all of your faults and loves you because of them."

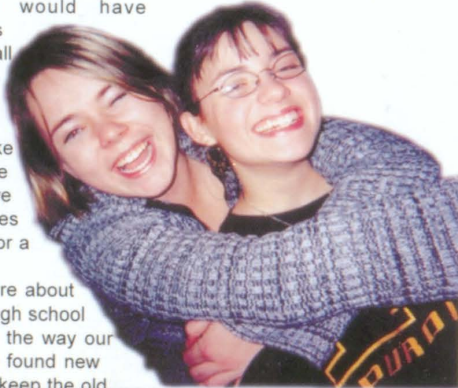

This year the Quiver staff decided to take best friends page to a whole new level. Students were told over the intercom about a contest to determine the "best" best friends at the school. The rules for the contest required best friends to write a story telling the staff why they deserved to be crowned ULTIMATE best friends. The entries were required to include information about how long the friends had known each other and where they met. Winning stories would earn a coveted spot in the yearbook. Students responded positively to the contest; the Quiver room was flooded with stories and pictures from a wide variety of students throughout the school.

The easy part was getting the entries; the hard part was judging them. Creativity and originality were key criteria as staff members searched for that special story that illustrated true friendship. The illustrious title of "ULTIMATE best friends" was originally intended to be bestowed upon just one group of friends, but the outstanding entries made for a difficult choice. In the end, we settled on eight finalists instead of one. Amidst the crowd of different faces at LC, these groups of friends have forged unique bonds. Congratulations to our eight ULTIMATE best friends!

"We met in sixth grade at Kahler. We were in almost all of the same classes. We didn't become friends until the end of the year when she sat with me at lunch. From then on we hung out all the time. We would have stargazing parties and sleep-overs all the time, and just had a blast whenever we were together. Like all best friends we have times that we fight and sometimes do not even talk for a while but we get through it. We were about to embark on to high school and we had seen the way our older siblings had found new friends and didn't keep the old middle school buddies. Freshman year came and we survived, but it was hard since we only had one class together. We consider ourselves not only as best friends but as sisters too."

Erica Knoff (10) and Melanie Johnsen (10)

"We met when we were only three years old. We lived just a block away, and we became inseparable. We spent many hours playing dress up and having tea parties. When we became older, we played school and took on roles of our future career dreams. In middle school, we shared inside jokes that we would laugh at in classes. Now we have special scary movie nights and chill while eating our favorite pizza. We take frequent trips to the mall and eat at our school because we have too much homework to get together during the week. From the day we met, we have faced challenges in our friendships. When we can, we get together and have many laughs and share wonderful memories. We will be friends now and forever."

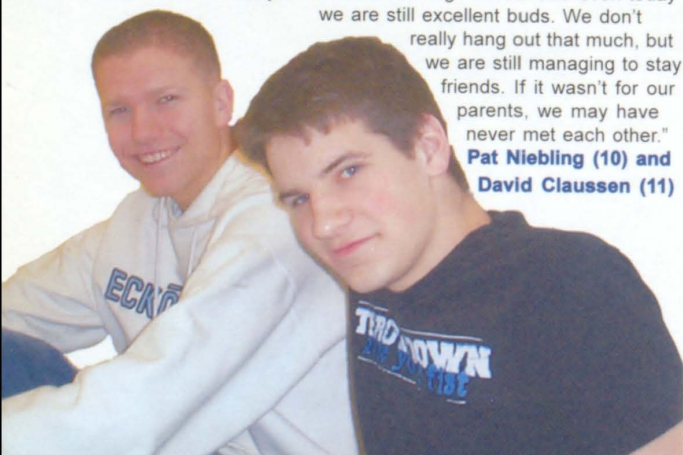

Amanda Warren (9) and Stephanie Ferrini (9)

"We have known each other since we were little. We lived across the street from each other and our parents were good friends. We grew up around each other and stayed friends all through school and even today we are still excellent buds. We don't really hang out that much, but we are still managing to stay friends. If it wasn't for our parents, we may have never met each other."

Pat Niebling (10) and David Claussen (11)

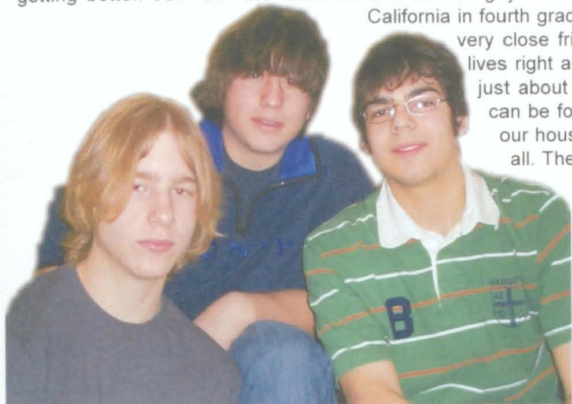

"How many people can say they've had the same best friends for 13 years? In most cases it's very rare. In those shy days when the only people you knew were your family, and you're forced to start and find your own path and personality, the three of us stuck together, and after 13 years are the closest we've ever been. It's comforting knowing there are always two people that you undoubtedly know will have your back and give you someone to lean on. Yeah, we've had our drama, but we always find ourselves back where we started. We always can find some fun and humor as long as we're all together; after all, we are the TRUE Posse."

Jackie Sterling (12), Tiffany Martin (12), and Lynsey Cypher (12).

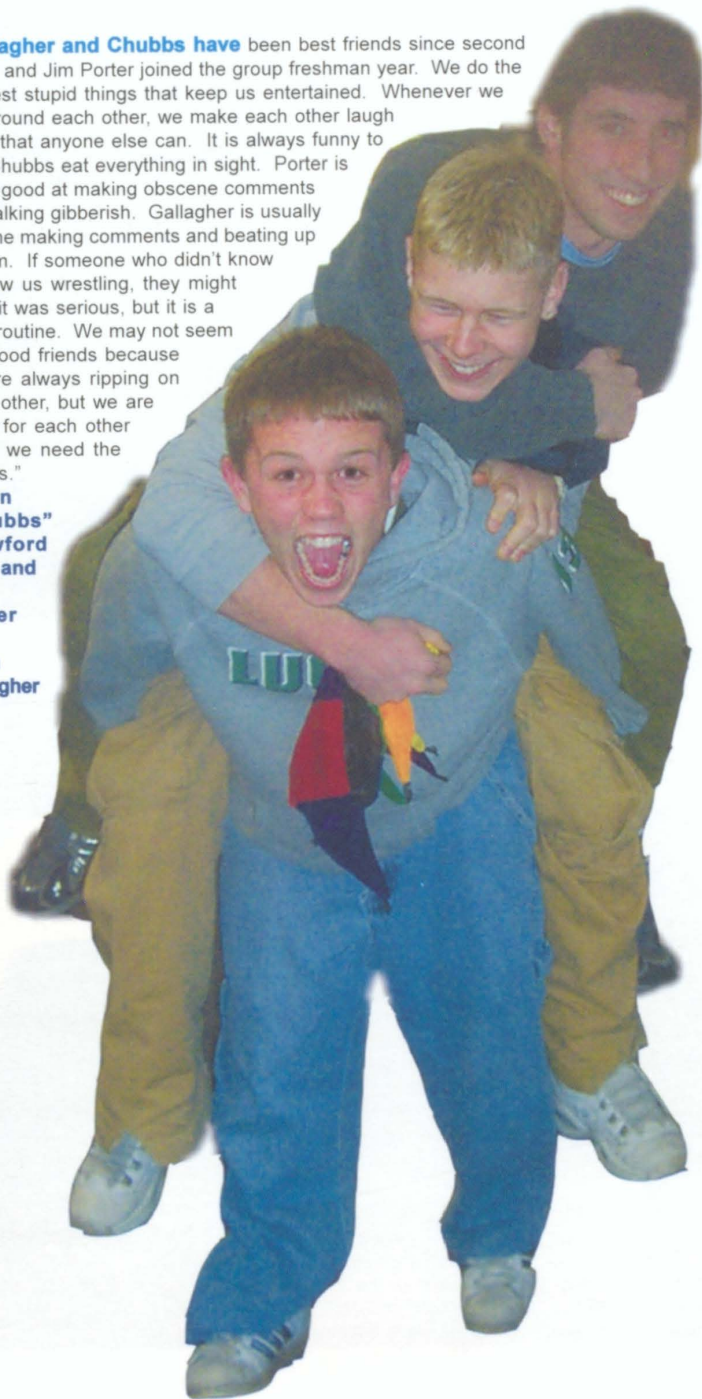

"The three of us spend most of our time together chillin' like Matt Dillon on penicillin or skating. I have known G.D. since kindergarten and our friendship is only getting better. Jon on the other hand is the new guy. Jon came to Indiana from California in fourth grade. We have become very close friends because he lives right across the street. On just about any weekend we can be found at any one of our houses doing nothing at all. The three stooges..."

"Gallagher and Chubbs have been best friends since second grade and Jim Porter joined the group freshman year. We do the funniest stupid things that keep us entertained. Whenever we are around each other, we make each other laugh more than anyone else can. It is always funny to see Chubbs eat everything in sight. Porter is really good at making obscene comments and talking gibberish. Gallagher is usually the one making comments and beating up on Jim. If someone who didn't know us saw us wrestling, they might think it was serious, but it is a daily routine. We may not seem like good friends because we are always ripping on each other, but we are there for each other when we need the others."

in guys. We both love to party and hang out and meet new people. It seems like we share the same brain.

One time we spent an entire day together, and everything we did, we thought of at the exact same time. The whole day was so weird, but so much fun at the same time. I can tell Kristie anything, and I know she will always support me in my decisions. When I'm down she's there to comfort me and vice-versa. We both know that we would do anything for each other. Even though we are heading in separate directions after high school, we will always be friends. No matter what happens or how far apart we are, we know that we will always be there for each other when we need it. Best Friends For Life." Kristie Smith (12) and Raquel Yocum (12)

"Most of Lake Central knows my best friend.

Her name is Brooke Baker and always has a hand to lend. We both share the same common interest of softball. It doesn't matter if it is in the summer or the fall. We've been playing ball together since we were about 5 years old. I really didn't like her; that is what I was told.

But that is beside the point and now it doesn't matter. Now we go shopping, hang out, or even just chill together. Brooke and I are the loud and obnoxious ones of our group. We're always telling jokes and saying stuff smells like poop

In the summer, we are always driving to the mall. We always run around the car and hope to God we don't fall.

I know I can share secrets and she'll never tell.

We're friends like Kelly and Lisa from Saved By the Bell.

We're not just friends on the softball field, We just keep going even if the sign says, "YIELD".

I'm really proud of her and I hope she knows that.

She's always there when I need to chat. Now, the time begins when I will rarely see here.

I hope that we are always BEST friends forever."

Parking Lot

Crowding the

LC experiments with a new parking pass system

As students sat in the long line of cars waiting to enter the parking lot, found their numbered spaces, and ran into school, they prayed that the bell had not already rung.

LC wanted to show that they could reinvent the parking pass system this year. On the designated day in the summer, students arrived as early as four o'clock in the morning to receive parking passes. Each student was given a numbered spot on a first come, first serve basis.

"We got here at five in the morning, and there were only three people in front of us. We got really good spots. They weren't supposed to start distributing passes until 9 a.m., but they started at 7 a.m. We got our passes, and we went out to eat for breakfast afterwards," said Suzanne Richardson (12).

It looked as though the new system was doomed to fail after the first week of school. Students didn't know where their spaces were, and people were parking in the wrong spots. This problem, however, was soon resolved, and the new parking arrangement succeeded. The numbered spaces have sometimes resulted in interesting situations.

Amy Stremplewski (12) said, "I had to be here early one morning for softball and it was snowing. We were all out in the parking lot with our scrapers clearing off the snow trying to find our spaces. It was really funny, but it was so cold!"

In past years LC has had problems with students without parking passes driving to school, and principals hoped that this new policy would prevent this from happening. They also hoped that the new system would allow them to catch any students who were driving without passes.

Many students who did not get passes parked on the streets in the subdivision behind the school, in friends' driveways, or in the parking lots of local businesses.

The packed parking lot was often the scene of multiple accidents.

Andrea Cohen (11) said, "People are in such a hurry to get out of the parking lot at the end of the day that they don't pay attention to what's going on around them. Everyone is just so careless."

As the days ended students ran from the crowded hallways to the even more crowded parking lot.

Joanna Stevenson (11) walks towards her car. She parks in an empty lot behind school because she wasn't able to get a parking pass.

Amy Stremplewski (12) merges into the line of traffic. Merging into traffic after school often causes a commotion.

Brian Fentress (11) waits patiently in a long line, trying to leave before the lines get to long and it is impossible to get out.

At the end of the day, Nick Thomas (11) runs down the crowded isles of the parking lot towards his car.

Nicole Chelbana (12) rushes into her car. Students rush in hopes of beating the buses out of the lot.

What do you think of the new parking system?

"I think the new parking lot system is good, but if you have a bad spot it kind of stinks because you can't change where you park, so in that sense I wish we still did it the way we used to." -Nicole Schutz (11)

"I like the new parking lot system because you always have a parking spot, and you always know where you are going to park" -Zach Rhoads (12)

"I think the new parking lot system is stupid! I think as long as you have a pass you should be able to park wherever you want to. It's more organized but when it snows it's so hard to find your number." -Brett Carter (11)

"I like the new system; I always know I will have a spot. I do feel bad for the sophomores, though, because they can't cheat the system anymore." -Katie Chick (12)

Tri-Town Rivalry at Lake Central

Going to Lake Central is different from attending any other school. Unlike Munster or Highland, LC feeds from three different towns. It gives our school variety and personality. However, it also sparks Tri-Town rivalry among students from Dyer, St. John, and Schererville.

Each of the three towns has their own flavor and styles. One diehard fan of Dyer has nothing but optimism for the future of Dyer.

"I love Dyer. Dyer is so awesome; someday it will become a country. It will secede from the union, and its major exports will be cheap fireworks, cigarettes, and gas," explained history teacher, Mr. Tom Clark, a Dyer resident for over 20 years.

Overshadowed by the commercial development of Schererville, Dyer still offers local hot spots such as Stardust Bowl, Bellacino's, and, its newest addition, The Coffee Beanery.

No one should underestimate the magnitude of St. John. Everyone must remember that even though it might not seem to contain many places of interest, the town of St. John does carry its own weight. Lake Central, which is located in St. John, takes over 1300 hours of every student's time per year. Sporting events, concerts, plays, practices, meets, dances, and so much more keep drawing us back to St. John, even on the weekends.

Compared to both Dyer and St. John, Schererville is the home of many more local hangouts. Who doesn't go to Showplace 16, Starbucks, Schererville Golf, or Round the Clock?

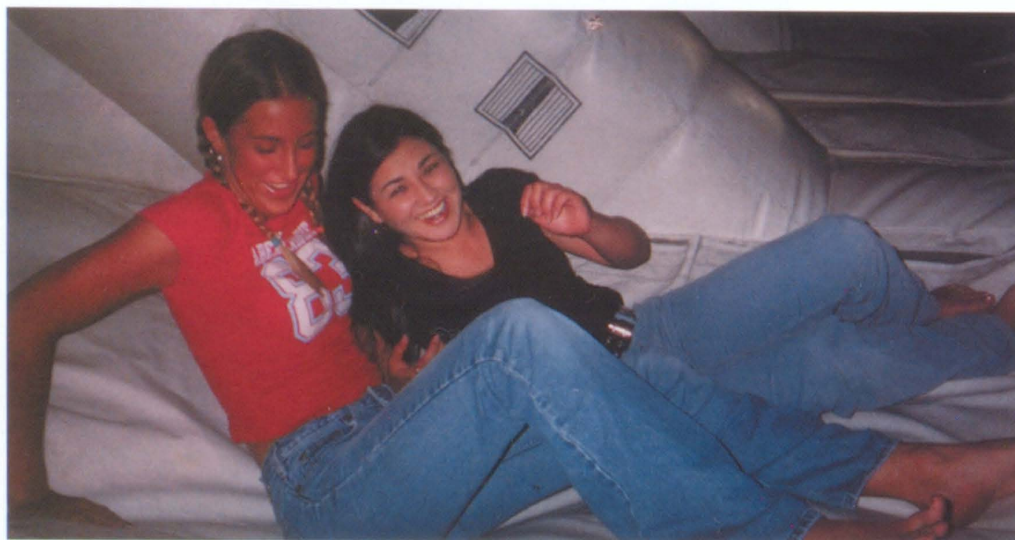

Jordan Bainer (12) has strong opinions when it comes to the town he lives in, especially since he moved from Dyer to Schererville. "I moved on up. Schererville is a Glade Plug-in compared to Dyer. Schererville has clean air," he said.

Britt Bushong (11) agreed, "Dyer is trash. It's all about 'S-Ville.' Schererville has everything. Shopping centers, Starbucks, Old Navy, and Panera are just the beginning. There is absolutely nothing in Dyer."

Despite the intense Tri-Town rivalry between Lake Central students and the three towns dividing us, we all unite as one massive crowd in the halls of LC.

Having three towns to contribute to academics, athletics, and friends makes Lake Central unique in every aspect of student life.

FOOD BLOOD Three Times The Help BLOOD FOOD

Lake Central's students and faculty take part every year in helping others by donating food, toys, and blood to people in need. The Interact club set a goal of 100,000 cans for the school. Everyone chipped in to surpass it by collecting over 115,000 items.

"It was incredible the amount of support that we got from families; we never expected to achieve our goal. I was in charge of tallying each SRT's total, and when I counted 100,001 and saw there were still more to go, I screamed 'We did it!' and Clark almost fainted," said Meagan Stephans (12).

The total included over 50 turkeys donated by students, families, and local businesses. The C-hall foyer was overflowing with bags full of food, toys, clothes, money, and other everyday necessities. Students went door-to-door, donated money and food of their own, passed out flyers, went shopping, and even held a contest between SRTs to see who could collect the most.

Mr. Tom Clark and other members distributed the food on Thanksgiving Day to shelters around the area. Mr. Clark's students also won the SRT competition with a total of 7,249 cans. The top five SRTs won a pizza party for their entire class. The food drive was a much bigger success than many had expected.

Students also took part in a Student Council-sponsored Toy Drive for children less fortunate during Christmas. The participating SRTs each adopted a child for whom to buy gifts. The children created a wish list of the things they needed or wanted most.

Members of each SRT tried their best to purchase everything on the list and more. They collected money and donated their own to help the children have a better Christmas. Some classes took the money they collected and went shopping during the weekend to pick out gifts and wrapped them in their spare time.

The Blood Drive also showed the length that students will go to help others. The Heartland Blood Center, along with Kathy Ignas, helped collect 96 units of students' blood. Each donation can save the lives of three people. Students snacked on free cookies after the virtually painless process and agreed that they were happy to help such a worthy cause.

Throughout the year, Indians worked together to help others while having fun in the process. Each and every drive was a success thanks to our caring students. Spread by Nikki Carmody and Rohnda Hoogewerf

Fun In The Sun

Spring Break provides a needed hiatus

As the week before Spring Break dragged on, the chatter in the hallways was filled with names of exotic places that students would be vacationing. Some students traveled out of the country to places like Mexico or the Caribbean. Others stayed in the US and traveled around the country to different tourist spots such as the Grand Canyon and Disney World.

David Crum (9) spent his vacation at Disney World.

"The weather was nice and relaxing. It make me forget about some of my responsibilities here at school. I was disappointed to have to come home to cold weather," he said.

Other students were lucky enough to be able to travel to the warmth of the islands. Stephanie Raab (9) went to Key Largo and Key West.

"It was so beautiful down there. I really enjoyed going snorkeling because I never see any of the animals that I saw. There were so many gorgeous fish," she said.

But most of the school's population stayed and hung out in the Tri-Town area. Some students were forced to stay in the area due to sport practices.

Kyle Ramsy (12) opted to stay home so that he could continue his track workouts without interruption. Fortunately, his dedication paid off in an improved performance at the end of the week.

"I was able to sleep in on Monday and Tuesday, but the rest of the week I had early morning practices. The highlight of my week was eating at four different restaurants in one night!" he said.

Like Ramsy, students not headed for exotic destinations were still able to find fun things to do. Moderate weather allowed for day trips to Chicago and adventures around the Tri-Town area. Staying home also meant catching up on all that lost sleep.

Many students' vacations were affected by the war with Iraq. Several students who had anticipated boarding a plane and travelling to a cross-country destination were forced to change their plans.

"I was supposed to go to New York City and San Francisco, but I wasn't able to go because of the threats of terrorism. I hope that I will be able to go sometime soon," said Jacquelyn Moredich (11).

In the end, the break was a much needed hiatus from school and most Indians returned from their time off refreshed for the end of the school year.

TALENT TALENT TALENT Indian Idol

On April 11, 2003, the auditorium filled up to its maximum capacity with students, parents, and teachers. The large audience waited impatiently for the show to begin. When the curtain opened to the band Mike Muenich and Friends, the crowd went crazy.

The packed auditorium made some performers a little nervous, but the enthusiastic audience helped many to overcome their stage fright.

Alan Gross (12) said, "I was a little bit nervous, but once the crowd started cheering, it took the edge off."

Members of other acts recognized the positive benefits of the large, supportive crowd.

"Performing in front of all the people was the best part of the talent show," said Theatre Hero Mark McLain (12). "This was the biggest crowd we have performed for."

McLain was also pleased that his improv group improved on last year's second place ranking in the miscellaneous category by earning the category's top honor.

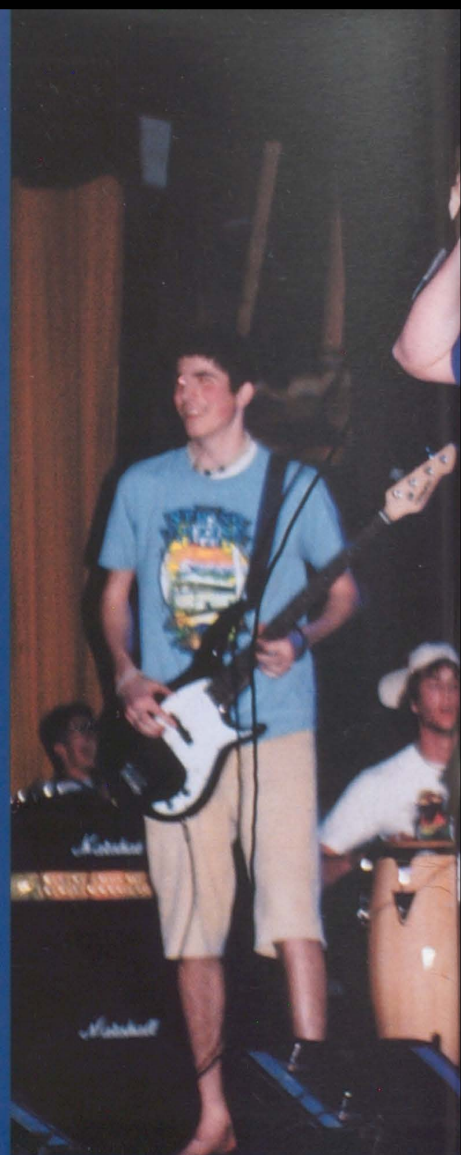

Senior MCs Lindsay Frost, Sarah Conley, and Nick Poteres did their best to entertain the audience in between acts.

"Hosting the talent show was a lot of fun," said Frost. "Being able to make the crowd laugh and have front row seats for the show made for a good night."

Though the show was very successful, the night was not without controversy. Bands were given seven minutes to perform and other acts were allowed five. Many performers griped about the restricted time limits, and a few were even disqualified for going over their allotted time. The band From Now Until Tomorrow threw souvenir Dracula teeth into the audience at the end of the set and felt that the action may have hurt them in the eyes of the judges.

The "Indian Idol" show was filled with outstanding performances. The first place singing award went to Ashley Mielcarek (10). She sang a beautiful rendition of Mandy Moore's "Only Hope." Hiatus 21, which consisted of Scott Evanson, Chris Lloyd, Luke VandenAkker, and Jack Goldsberry (all 12), was named the top band. Their crazy outfits and fun antics helped to set them apart from their competition.

The Merry Slinksters and Other Assorted Unsolved Mysteries of the Great Pyramids, the last act of the show, ended the night on a high note. The Way You Look Tonight

Months of preparation pay off at the big dance

Drawing over five hundred students, Prom lived up to its legacy and delivered a magical evening for all who attended.

What lasted a mere four hours actually took the Junior Class Cabinet three years to prepare. Starting with fund-raising their freshman year, members organized and planned the event, making sure that not even the smallest detail was overlooked. The fruit of their labor was an unforgettable night for juniors, seniors, and the few freshmen and sophomores who were fortunate enough to have upperclass dates.

Prom planning was not limited to the Junior Class Cabinet. For attending students, the tedious preparation began months prior to the event, with the selection of a dress and hairstyle for girls and financial planning and tuxedo rental for guys. Many spent hundreds of dollars on prom attire, but Greg Martino (12) took a different path. He arrived in style wearing a tee shirt with an image of a tuxedo printed on it. Many students had the additional stress of acting as the leaders of their prom groups by arranging transportation and planning post prom activities.

The night began as limos, cars, and party buses rolled into the Serbian Social Center in Lansing, Illinois. Dressed in glamorous tuxedos and gowns, the couples entered the building with high expectations that the evening would be a night to remember.

As "Brown Eyed Girl" by Van Morrison blasted through the speakers, students entered the dance hall searching for friends or getting in line for pictures.

Amazed by the stunning decorations, Prom-goers stopped to take in the beauty of the night.

"I thought the decorations were really cute. Overall, besides the line for pictures, everything was really nice," said Kathryn Golden (11).

As the night continued, students anxiously awaited the Prom court announcement by junior class cabinet president, Jacquelyn Moredich (11). As the junior court was named, a shocked Samantha Staresinich (11) radiated joy as she was crowned junior Princess.

Finally, the moment that the senior class had been waiting for arrived, and Prom King and Queen were announced.

The titles went to Laura Anderson and Mike Mannion.

"I was really surprised. I never expected to win. I've been on a lot of ballots and have never won, so I felt like the Susan Lucci of high school dances. I feel privileged that my class chose me and it was a great way to end my four years at LC," said Anderson.

As the music blared, students left thoughts of finals, college and work behind them.

The magical night ended as the Prom song, Tony Bennett's "The Way You Look Tonight" poured out onto the dance floor.

"The last two dances were my favorite part of the night," said Natasha Wojciechowski (12).

By the end of the night, the tired teenagers exited the hall and ventured on their way to many different post Prom destinations.

While the night was expensive, many felt it was well worth the money.

Thanks to the hard work of the junior class cabinet, Prom produced many memories that will last a lifetime, preserved forever in photos and the minds of over of 500 students and their dates.

PROM PROM PROM 3 Days of Celebration

Prom parties call for extended weekend

After spending tons of money on dresses, tuxes, flowers, and limos, students prepped for an equally expensive weekend. Whether it was enjoying the great outdoors, riding the new Superman roller coaster at Great America, hopping a train to Chicago, or just hanging out with friends, everyone looked forward to relaxing and having fun.

Limos lined up in the parking lot, ready to whisk students away for a magical evening. Countless tables at fine dining establishments throughout the Tri-Town and Chicago areas were also waiting for students to arrive after the dance. After dinner some groups spent the night together, while others went home to get some rest for the big weekend. The next few of days were filled with camping and other entertainment.

Students woke up early to prepare for their activities. Some went shopping for food, tents, cameras, and other necessities for camping. Others got a head start in order to be the first ones in line for the rides at Great America. Some laced up a pair of their most comfortable shoes for a day of sight-seeing in Chicago.

Everyone looked forward to nice weather for the weekend, but things turned into a muddy mess for some. Lake Monroe was a popular campsite that many students stayed at after Prom. With a tornado in the morning, most campers were covered in mud by the end of the night. Fortunately, the dirt did little to ruin anyone's fun, and many campers came back with entertaining stories.

"Ron Jankovich and Cody Takacs were grilling at 1:30 in the morning and someone decided to throw a shoe on the grill. Bill Bryk kicked the shoe off and knocked the grill over, which started the cabin on fire. It was crazy and put out quickly," Josh Morgan (12).

Lake Monroe was not the only messy campsite. Hidden Paradise had disasters of its own.

"George Kasakis decided to buy generic cereal before the trip. When trying to open the bag, Froot Loops went flying everywhere. Being the gentleman that he was, he tried to sweep it up with decoration broom hanging on the wall of the cabin. Even though that was a good idea, the bristles were too soft to pick up the mess. We crunched on Froot Loops for the rest of the weekend!" said Sam DeKruiff (12).

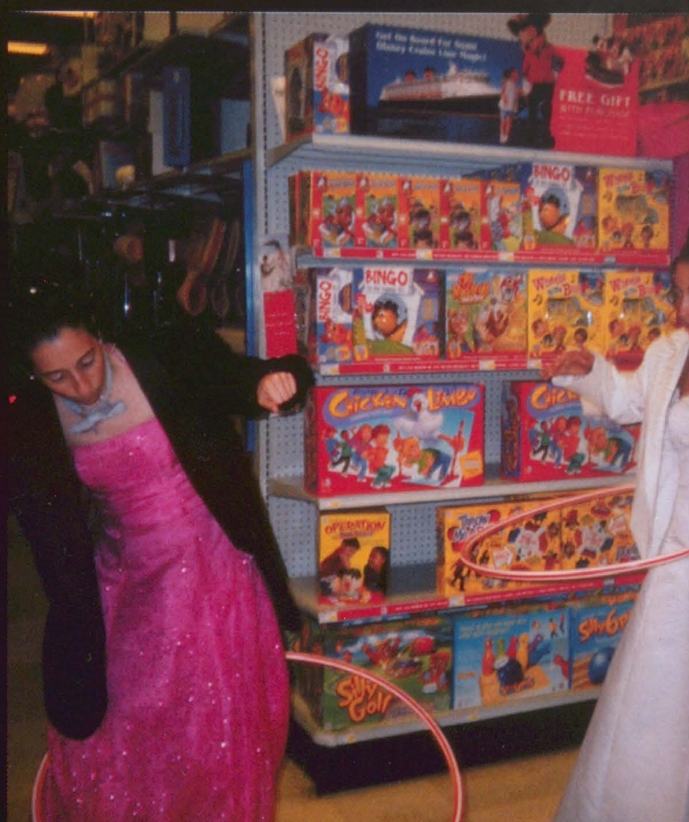

Students lined up eagerly to ride the new Superman roller coaster at Great America, which some thought was too slow. Whether rolling in the mud or flying through the air, students enjoyed a memorable after Prom experience and a great ending to the year.

GRAD GRAD GRAD GRAD GRAD

Three times the Memories

A steady stream of cars jammed eastbound traffic on US 30 in Merrillville on June 5, 2003. Drivers and passengers sighed as they waited for the light to turn green, signaling that they could finally gain entry to the parking lot of the Star Plaza theatre. Emerging from each vehicle were anxious teens and emotional relatives. The soon-to-be graduates fidgeted with their cumbersome mortarboard hats and talked with friends as they entered the building.

Once inside, the capped and gowned crowd was quickly herded into the large Star Plaza auditorium to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" and promptly blinded by hundreds of blinking flashbulbs.

In addition to parading on stage in front of a crowd of thousands, some students had the extra responsibility of speaking to the large audience.

"I was very nervous about delivering my speech," said co-class president Sam DeKruiff. "My mom told me to imagine the audience in their underwear, but when I got to the podium I couldn't see anybody. That was probably a good thing."

DeKruiff and her fellow class officers decided to put the money they raised over the course of four years towards a variety of endeavors. They provided cash for the school to purchase new landscaping and put money into two scholarship funds- one in the name of Christina Chakonas and one for Dollars for Scholars. Class secretary Ashley Gulden was tasked with presenting the class gift.

"It was such a great experience to be able to present. It was such an energy rush," she said.

Each and every graduate would remember his or her march across the stage.

"Walking across the stage was a unique experience," said Lauren Ausmus. "I'll never forget it."

When the whole affair was over, students commented on its surprisingly short duration.

"With the amount of people graduating, the administration had great time management," said Vaughn Ganiyu.

Graduates crowded outside the building to say good-byes and reminisce about their high school years that were now over. They discarded their caps and gowns and prepared to make their departure.

Roadways surrounding the Star Plaza were once again blocked, this time with cars full of former LC students ready to leave high school behind and drive away into the future. Spread by Katie Farrer, Lauren Kaptur, Anne Klingeberger, and Meghan Peters

Speakers

Speakers provided words of wisdom to the graduating class.

"After four years of learning and growing, we have finally matured into responsible young adults, ready to start another chapter of our lives. So much has happened to us over the last four years. Some things have made us laugh and some have made us cry. But all of these experiences have made us come together."
- Samantha DeKruiff

"We all learned something the last four years. Even if you didn't open up one text book, you still learned something. You learned something about life. Maybe you learned something about people, about society. Maybe you learned the importance of friendship. Maybe you learned that you hate school."
- Kyle Brown

"What I can do is share with you a few pieces of advice that I have either read, heard from others, or learned from experience; a few pieces of advice that have inspired me to achieve a successful past, and which I can only hope will inspire you to reach for a successful future."
- Kate Mitchell

"So as we look back on our high school career we realize how important memories are and how much we have learned and grown because of our experiences. We go through good times and bad, find new friends and keep the old, teach and are taught, but we remember who we are and what we have become."

For Fashion

A Passion

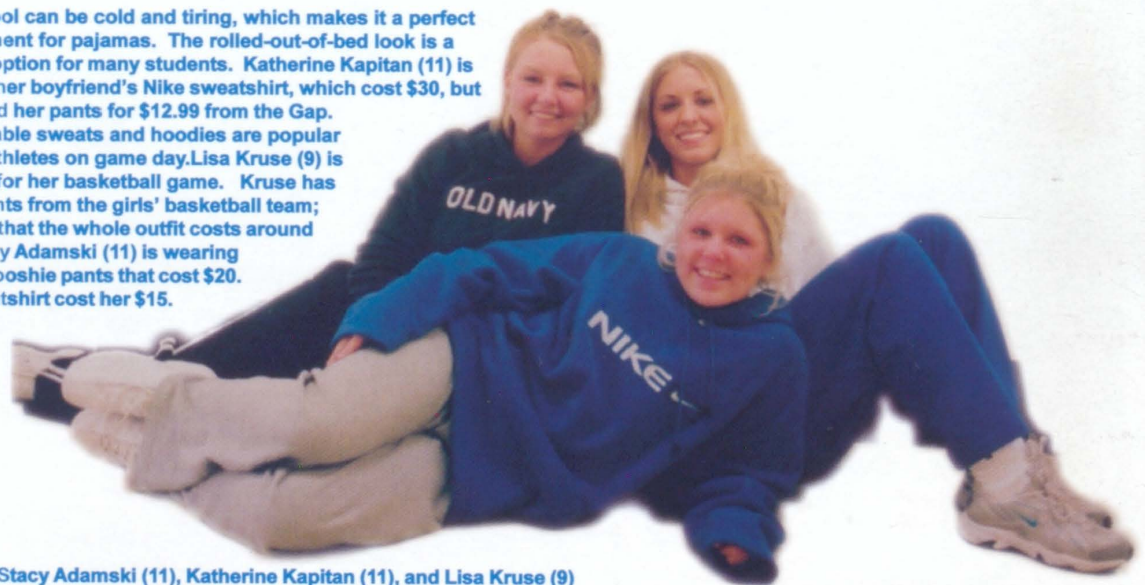

Students sense of fashion is priceless.

These three freshmen have a passion for fashion. Breanne Smith prefers to shop at Hollister, where she bought her shirt for $20. Her $40 pants came from 5-7-9. Greg Gehrig is an avid American Eagle shopper with both his $50 pants and $30 shirt from AE. Apparently AE is a hot spot to shop because Becky Zamora also bought her outfit there. Zamora's shirt cost her $20 and her pants were $50.

Breanne Smith (9), Greg Gehrig (9), and Becky Zamora (9)

The school can be cold and tiring, which makes it a perfect environment for pajamas. The rolled-out-of-bed look is a favorite option for many students. Katherine Kapitan (11) is wearing her boyfriend's Nike sweatshirt, which cost $30, but she found her pants for $12.99 from the Gap. Comfortable sweats and hoodies are popular among athletes on game day. Lisa Kruse (9) is dressed for her basketball game. Kruse has sweatpants from the girls' basketball team; she said that the whole outfit costs around $50. Stacy Adamski (11) is wearing L.E.I. swooshie pants that cost $20. Her sweatshirt cost her $15.

Stacy Adamski (11), Katherine Kapitan (11), and Lisa Kruse (9)

Lettermen's jackets are a popular commodity for athletes. The jacket itself costs $134. The LC is $12 and the Indian logo is $15. Both the embroidered name on the front and the graduation numerals cost $5. Each year an athlete letters they receive a chevron for $3.50. This adds up to a grand total of $169.50 and this was just the beginning. Megan Laya (11) paid $26 for each of her two patches. Ryan Goodman (10) paid $13 for his one patch. Susan Allegretti (10) put a small fortune into her jacket; with seven patches at $13 a patch, she spent a total of $91.

Susan Allegretti (10), Ryan Goodman (10), and Megan Laya (11)

Nate Drozd (12) and Katie Slimski (12) are proud of their unique style. Drozd's hoodie cost him $15 and his Dickies pants were a little more on the pricy side at $50. Slimski went for the bargain ensemble, with her whole outfit costing a mere $15. Her comfy sweater was a steal at $2, her scarf was only 30 cents; her shirt was 60 cents, and her pants were $10.

Nate Drozds (12) and Katie Slimski (12)

Tomasz Juchniewicz (12) and Dave Nagdeman (12) sport the "shag" hairstyle. It took Juchniewicz one year to grow it to the length he wanted. He didn't feel the need to use any styling gel because he liked the untamed look of his hair. Nagdeman's hair took him 11 months to grow, and he used curly hair lotion to achieve his look. Because he was a swimmer, he was concerned about the texture of his hair and prefers it to feel silky smooth.

Active Learning

Sitting in class, listening to lectures, learning from books...how productive can this really be for students doing the same thing four times each day? Some teachers try a different approach.

"For some students it's the best way to learn. There are many different learning styles. For some students, hands-on is a great way to go," said Mr. Jeff Rhody, a kinesiology teacher.

Sitting in a desk with pen in hand while trying to keep from falling asleep day after day can make the learning process repetitive and tedious.

"I pay more attention in Recreational Sports because we are not only sitting in a classroom taking notes. The subjects we cover are different and interesting and something I may actually want to know later in life," explained Brian Fentress (11).

This attitude is shared by a large majority of students. Even teachers agree that it is important to keep students active in class to avoid losing their attention. Psychology and sociology teacher Mr. Raplh Holden said, "Teaching and learning should be something everyone loves to do, and what does everyone love? Having fun. Hands-on-learning makes everything more fun and interesting."

One subject that seems to use the most of this active technique is science. Many chemistry classes are based on this method, mainly because it is the only way to grasp the reality of the subject.

"Chemistry is often an abstract subject. By performing experiments, students can see the compositions we discuss in class, instead of just hearing about them," said Mr. David Harnish.

Greg Martino (12), likes Mr Harnish's interactive method.

"It gives me the motivation to wake up in the morning," he said.

Mr. Tom Clark includes hands-on-learning in his Honors U.S. History classes by interviewing war veterans.

"Hands-on learning has a tendency to help students remember more, by putting names and faces with the statistics. This research stimulates their minds, encouraging them to want to learn more," Clark said.

Students and teachers will agree that learning by doing is much more productive than just learning by book.

Electives are classes that students choose to help them with their career goals or to just have some plain fun. Three in particular are woods, foods, and print shop.

To some, these classes might seem too messy, too boring, or involve too many splinters. But others see these classes in another way, a way that will make them world famous, or a way that help them do something that they most enjoy. Whoever said woods class was just for boys was sadly mistaken. Erica Piffier (11), the only girl in a classroom full of guys, says the opposite sex does not treat her differently. She explains that she took the class because she wanted to try something new. She adds that the worst part of the class is when a project is finished and it breaks.

Woods class is an excellent way for students to use their creativity to build a project that they will always have to keep or give as a gift.

Adam Rokosz (12) said, "Woods class is a great way to make a gift for a loved one around birthdays and Christmas."

Chili cheese dip is what's cooking in the foods class.

"It is munchilicious," said Mike Mullins (11), Kyle Mohrbach (11), Tommy Dutko (11), and Jason Peterson (11).

The most memorable meal for the four guys was a breakfast.

"The biscuits and gravy was a great breakfast because it was a team effort," they explained.

Some members of the class even take the recipes home and make them. It is rumored that some guys are bad at cooking, but foods class has provided them with an opportunity to break the stereotype.

So what exactly does print shop do? David DelVecchio (11) says that they run the school newspaper with the help of the Heidelberg GTO.

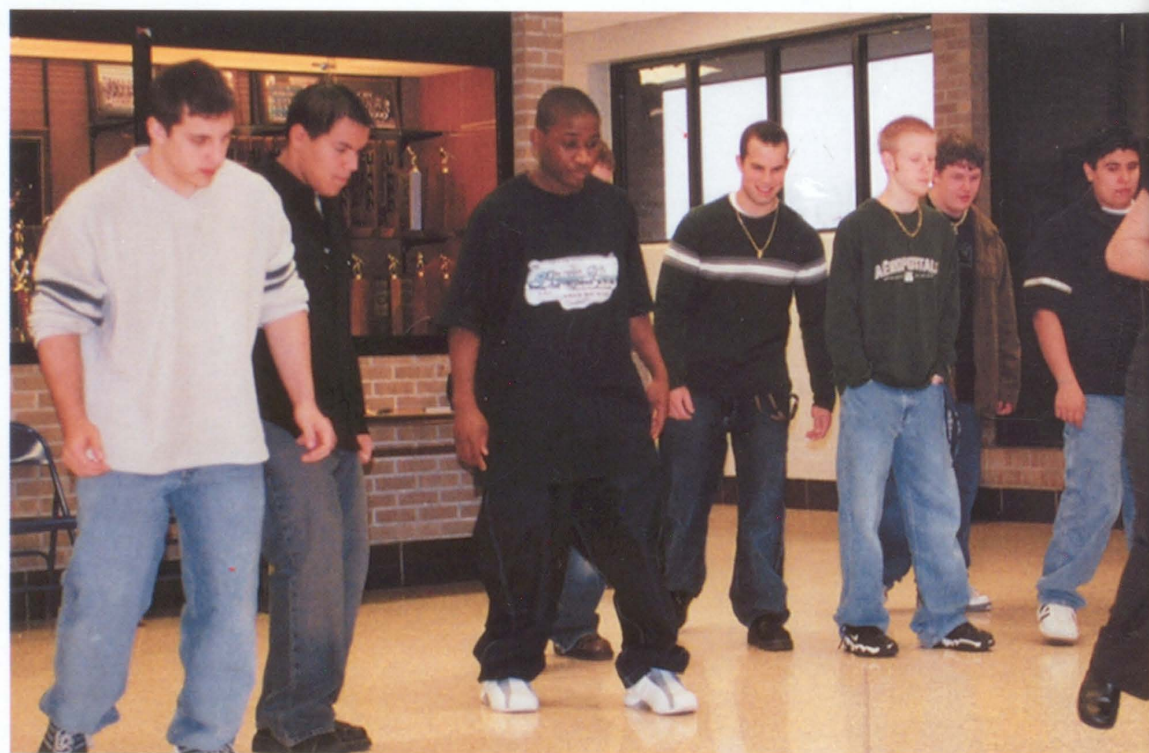

This is what makes the newspaper become a reality for everyone to enjoy. DelVecchio's favorite aspect of the class is freedom.

"You do not have a teacher standing around watching you every second," he explained.

The worst thing about the class is the ink, because it is almost impossible to get off.

Electives are a great way for everyone to do something fun and learn at the same time. Even if students don't want to make a career out of these activities, elective classes give them great experiences.

Active Presentations

From demonstration speeches in speech class to leading group activities in English, every student has been up in front of a class to give some sort of presentation. For some students, giving a presentation means butterflies in the stomach, a dry mouth, and sweaty palms, but for others presentations serve as a time that they can stand up and voice their opinion or inform the class about a topic that serves a special interest.

Every student takes at least one speech class during his or her sophomore year. This class involves much more than just studying and giving different types of speeches. Students also participate in pantomimes where one student uses exaggerated movements and lots of body language to get the rest of the class to guess what he or she is acting out. Impromptu speeches, which force students to make up a speech off the top of their heads, are very stressful for some.

"I hated doing my impromptu speech. I was so afraid I would just stand up there for a couple minutes without anything to say. I had this horrible feeling I would get stuck with a topic I knew absolutely nothing about," said Jenny Stevensen (10).

Speech class serves as a warm up for the many presentations ahead. Oral reports are a common activity for many, but some students get a taste of what it's like to be a teacher by leading a class discussion. Whether these discussions include questions over a short story or overviews of a chapter, students are given another opportunity to present in front of their peers.

"In Mrs. Tokoly's English class we had to discuss a chapter from The Age of Innocence. Some people dread getting up in front of the class, but I like it. It's cool to take the place of a teacher for a change and see things from a different perspective," said Ben Labas (11).

In psychology, students spend several weeks decorating a mask. They then get the opportunity to tell their classmates why they chose what they did for their mask and how it makes them feel.

Students get to test their communication skills when they present something to the class in another language. For many students, there simply aren't enough hours in the day as crowded schedules keep ambitious Indians busy around the clock. Dedicated members of the swim team wake up as early as 4 a.m. to jump into the icy pool for morning practice. Thespians rehearse after school way past the stroke of midnight during the "Hell Week" period that takes place right before a show opens. Junior Class Cabinet representatives spend nearly every free moment of their time worrying over decorations, chaperones, and deejays in preparation for Prom.

The myriad of activities that take place before and after school require dedication, effort, and above all, time. Sports, clubs, and creative endeavors can render words like "sleep" and "free time" foreign to their participants. But few of the occasionally exhausted students who involve themselves in these extracurricular pursuits would trade their multiple commitments for a few extra hours of rest or relaxation.

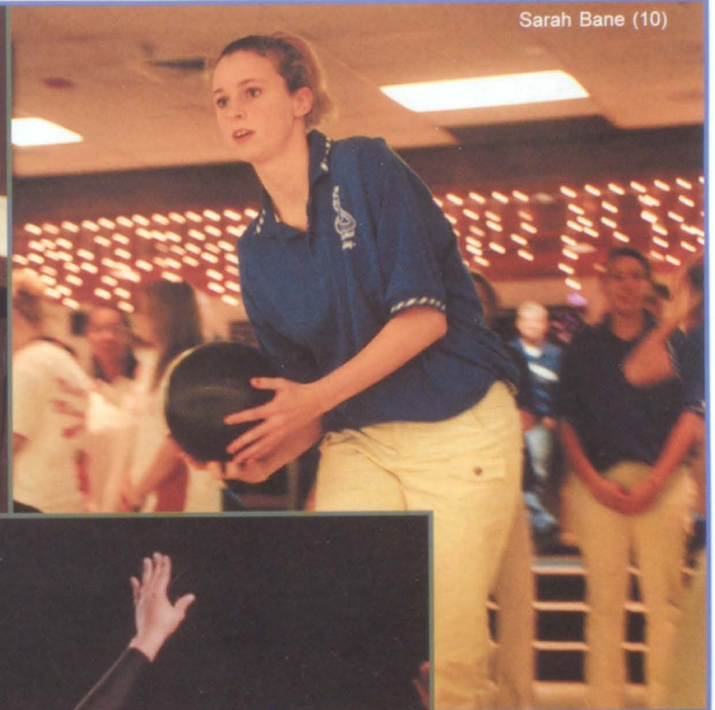

Students so willingly accept the challenge of crowding their multiple interests into a short day because, for them, sports, arts, and clubs aren't mere hobbies; they are ways of life. The exhilaration that comes from winning a game or meet, the pride experienced after putting the finishing touches on a painting, and the happiness that stems from serving a grateful face at a soup kitchen: these are the reasons students freely give up their time. We are all passionate; we are all busy; we all have one crowded schedule.

1 Crowded Schedule

Three Words: crowds, crowds, crowds

Agoraphobia is the fear of crowded places. Every year the incoming freshmen must face this fear as they deal with the jam-packed parking lots, busy hallways, and hectic lunches.

To deal with the problem of the busy parking lot this year, the Lake Central staff tried a new approach of assigned parking spaces. This method helped in some ways, but the parking lot is still congested with many students.

On the matter of assigned parking spots, Kate Greene (12) said, "No matter what they try to do there are still a lot of students, so it's going to be crowded."

With a big school one expects to find crowds, especially in the parking lot.

For the sophomores, making the transition from the large, welcoming freshmen center to the cramped, sometimes frightening high school can be somewhat overwhelming.

This is the worst for sophomores because they start out in the infamous lower E-hall.

Jessica Dekruiff (10) was not afraid to go into the high school, but she did have something to say about lower E.

She stated, "The school really did not scare me, but when I think of Lower E, I think of three things: crowds, crowds, and more crowds."

Lower E is not only crowded, but also filled with upperclassmen who tend to push and shove their way through the hall.

Once a student goes into lunch, he or she finally realizes how crowded Lake Central really is. Finishing one's lunch before the bell is one thing; finding a table is another. More often than not the underclassmen are forced to squeeze many friends at one little table while the upperclassmen sit comfortably at the big tables.

"I cannot wait until I am an upperclassman who can choose wherever I would like to sit without being worried about taking someone's table," Lauren Racine (9) commented.

Even four lunch periods and six lines are not enough to accommodate everyone's needs. Some students spend more time ordering their food than eating it.

It's not unusual to have the fear of crowded places, but it is something that everyone can overcome. Crowds do not always have to be a bad thing; they bring many different kinds of people together. Getting adjusted to the crowds of Lake Central may be difficult at first, but it prepares the students for the real world.

Spread by Andrea Racine and Krissy Curtis

Adam Diekman (12) and friends carefully fill out the forms for their caps and gowns. The crowds in the auditorium made it difficult to concentrate on filling out the form correctly.

A group of students crowd together in the front of the stands at a football game.

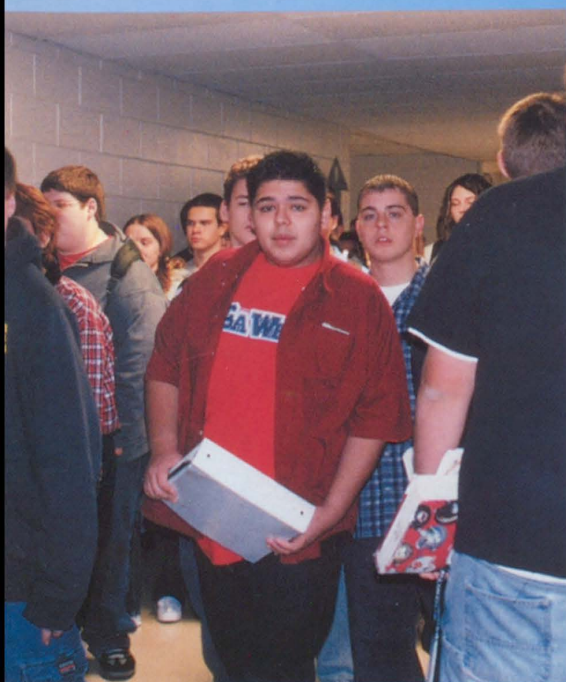

Jenny Klemme (12), Meghan Werner (12), and Dawn Schneider (12) enthusiastically cheer on the football team at Homecoming. Many students crowd together in the stands to show their school spirit.

Mr. Clark's first period students fit right in amongst his cluttered classroom. The students are always very tentative and eager to learn because he makes history exciting.

Underclassmen and upperclassmen alike all have to fight to get through busy lower E hall. Out of all the hallways in school, most would say this intersection is by far the most congested.

Some underclassmen have no problem getting through the busy hallways. Most of the time, though, juniors and seniors make it impossible to pass through.

Marc Kesheimer (12) aids Chris Ross (12) in finding the size for his graduation cap. The principals crowded all the seniors into the auditorium.

Bogey, Par, Eagle

Starting the season out with only one senior may be a little rough for some teams, but freshmen and sophomores proved to be a real asset to the girls' golf team. The season started with only two returning letterwinners, forcing the freshman and sophomore girls to step up to a varsity level at a very young age.

The scores continued to show improvement throughout the season. Unfortunately, the improvement didn't necessarily result in the form of wins. However, the experience that the underclassmen gained will eventually translate into wins two or three years down the road.

Golf is unique that there is not just one opponent on sectional day. Twelve teams compete for three spots.

"In golf you have to worry about all eleven teams on the same day as opposed to one at a time. As far as rivals, Crown Point, Andrean, Lowell, Rensselaer, as well as Hanover Central were brought into consideration because those are the teams who generally contend for the regional spots year and year out," said Coach Doug

Girls' golf team chips their way into sectionals

Johnson.

The team improved as the season progressed and emerged as one of the top competitors at sectionals. Although the team did not receive a high enough score to advance to the regional competition, one lucky senior did continue on.

Coach Johnson said, "In the ideal world, it would be nice to have two or three seniors on your varsity team to provide the leadership, maturity, and consistency that a team needs. Luckily, that one senior that we did have accomplished all of the things that usually requires a group to do."

Katie Farrer (12) had a very successful year and recognized the significant contributions of her teammates.

"Though we were young, we still succeeded," she said.

Despite the youthfulness of the team, they pulled together and finished on an upward trend. The upcoming years could prove to be promising for the team. The freshmen and sophomore girls gained very valuable experiences, which could definitely translate into wins in the future.

Varsity football team overcomes a rough start

Go I-N-D-I-A-N-S! This year's football team started out slowly because many contributing seniors graduated last year.

"Although we started out 0-3, we picked it up towards the end and played well together as a team," said Jared McMahon (12).

Starting out the season, the team lost games to Merrillville, Portage, and Munster. The game against Indianapolis Tech turned out to be the first victory of the season, with a final score of 51-8.

Josh Morgan (12), Ron Jankovich (12), and Geoff Walker (12) worked well together and made many successful passes to each other. Andrew Lawrence (11) also made many extra points and field goals that also contributed to the team's victory. The team was strong because everyone was so close to each other.

"Our team was like a family," said Brian Scheffel (12).

The team, the cheerleaders, and other friends gathered at the pasta parties every Thursday. These gatherings kept Indian spirits high.

"The pasta parties were fun because it gave us a chance to get ready for the game and get the fans excited for the game the next day," said Matt Bielat (11). The team was ready for the big sectional game against Merrillville and everyone went into the game confident.

"That was our most memorable game. It was Lake Central's first time beating the Pirates in seven years," said Ian Holmquist (12). "This game was our most exciting game because it was not only our sectional game, but the Pirates have a huge rivalry with us."

Their final sectional game against Valpo was disappointing. Unfortunately, the team lost 42-14. "We had a really fun season and came a long way thanks to our coaches and fans," said senior Josh Morgan. The team still had a fun season and everyone learned a little something about teamwork.

Soccer team shoots its way to a great season

De-fense! De-fense! Soccer fans chanted as they watched their defense hold off their opponents. The defense led the way with a remarkable 11-0 start. Under the guidance of Coach Jereme Rainwater, the varsity boys' soccer team captured first place at the Rainbow and Plymouth tournaments.

"We have a young team with lots of juniors who had lots of preseason practice to get them ready," said Coach Rainwater.

Chris Sullivan (11) and Shawn Stoces (11) led their team to several victories including tough matches against Valparaiso, Merrillville, and Hobart.

"We had an all-around good team," said Mark VandenAkker (10), "But the defense was probably our strongest point."

The good start of the season brought losses difficult to overcome. The team suffered broken noses, blisters, broken limbs, and losing some teammates for parts of the season. "Some big challenges we faced were Sullivan's broken leg because he is a key player on the team, and Paul Kiszka being out for part of the season too," said Adam McMenamy (11).

"Kris Jutkus being out for part of the season hurt the team's record," Dan Kiska (11).

"Our main problem was being able to score once we get the ball down the field," said Chris Bowman (11).

"The hardest part was coming together after a loss," said Chris Sullivan (11). The team's first loss was after an 11 game winning streak with no losses on their record for the year.

The team started off sectionals with a big win over Griffith with a final score of 1-0. Despite the tremendous effort, they lost 2-1 in a double overtime thriller against Merrillville, whom they had defeated just weeks earlier. The loss put an end to their season.

"The Griffith game was an easy game, though the score was only 1-0, we had many opportunities to score," said Coach Rainwater. Regardless of the loss in sectionals, the team finished strong with a good year.

The girls' varsity soccer team has a history of IHSAA tournament success and continued their winning ways this season. With a record of 10-6-5, they not only became sectional champions, but built themselves up to win the regional championship as well.

"We lost eight seniors last year. Everyone had called us a team that was in a rebuilding year, and that we were not going to make it out of sectionals. Well, we proved them wrong. We not only won our sectionals, but also our regional," said Coach Richard Moore.

Chesterton proved to be the team's most difficult adversary this year. After emerging victorious from sectionals and regionals, the girls knew that they had a tough game ahead of them.

The Indians went into semi-state with memories of losing to the Trojans in years past and were determined to make this year different. But their hopes for a trip to the state finals ended in a 1-0 loss to the team they had sought to defeat. The Indians remained optimistic after their loss and immediately began to condition for the next season.

"Chesterton will not stand in our way next year!" said a determined Coach Moore.

Jenna Mullins (12) was very pleased with her team's overall performance.

"Nobody thought we would get as far as we did. We have a young team, but I'm so proud of my girls!" she said.

Mullins was a big factor in the team's success and showed great improvement over her last season. She was quick to credit her teammates for contributing to her final high school soccer experience.

"This was the best season ever! Everyone worked so hard," she said.

Mullins and Amanda Sullivan were the only seniors on the team, and both were able to lead the young Indians with experience and skill. Though the guidance provided by the two seniors will be missed, the girls who won't be graduating this year are looking forward to another successful season. These underclassmen and juniors are prepared to continue the impressive legacy that this year's team is now a part of.

Though the boys' varsity tennis team didn't go far in the IHSAA tournament this year, they still put up a good fight.

The team went into their season not expecting much. The varsity team consisted of mostly sophomores and freshmen, and many players were in a position they hadn't played before. The team had only one senior, Raul Reddy.

"He played great for the team all year," Mike Muenich (11) said of Reddy. "He was a real leader."

Even with so few upperclassmen, the team was ready to play.

"We went in without fear," said Reddy.

Three high quality juniors led the team. Ben Labas (11) led the team's singles. He was on the All-District team and earned an All-State honorable mention. Mike Muenich and Josh Kaufman (11) were an All-District doubles team.

The team's 5-9 record fails to show what the team went through.

Tennis team "racqs" up some points

"We had a very tough schedule," said Coach Ralph Holden.

But the competition provided the Indians with chances to surprise some of the top teams in the area. The team beat Andean, a regional qualifier, with a score of 3-2.

"It was a big win for the team. It was definitely unexpected," said Muenich.

Also falling to the Indians was Duneland Conference champ Merrillville. At the Merrillville Invite, the team tied for first with Merrillville and Lowell.

But the level of play on display at these matches was not duplicated at sectionals. The team was defeated by Lowell and failed to advance to the regional competition.

Members on the sectional team remained upbeat after this loss and were still proud of their season.

"It was a good chance to show leadership," said Kaufman.

Boys Cross Country runs away with a sectional title

The boys cross country team sped through the beginning of a rough season. The team had a disadvantage going into this year. They had their top runner Nick Kruse and a lot of other talented seniors leave the team. "After our first meet we had a long talk about how we were looking forward to running a lot this year," said this years senior Brett Schloer.

The incoming seniors had to step it up and pick up the slack and try to fill the shoes left by Kruse and Crague. This years top runner Brett Schloer said, "It was going to be a rough year because so many guys graduated or transferred schools."

Seniors Brett Schloer, Mike Mannion, Kyle Ramsey and Rich Vercel showed their leadership and stepped up nicely for the Indians in the off season. Lake Central was not picked to be a dominating force this year as they have been in the past years. This left an opportunity to surprise a lot of people in the area. "We were not expected to win sectionals but, we did," said Schloer.

The Indians were able to take the sectional championship under the leadership of Coach Rudy Skorupa and Coach Jeff Rhody. Vercel said, "The team gave 110% at the sectional meet." This was a huge motivator for the Indians.

The following weekend they placed 5th in the regional meet and made it on to semi-state. Unfortunately the team placed 8th and did not advance to the state tournament.

Even though it was not as productive a year as years before, the guys still managed to have fun outside of practice. This season proved to be more of a challenge for the Indians, but they pulled through in the end. "I think the younger guys really stepped up and showed a lot of leadership that will be good for the future," said Vercel. The team will truly miss the seniors that are leaving this year, but look forward to future years which look to be very promising.

Sprints, Tempos, Success

To some, "tempos" and "fun-hills Tuesdays" sound like modern day nightmares. To the girls cross country team, however, they are elements that paved the road to success. "Tempos consisted of jogging for 4 minutes, and then sprinting for 3. This cycle was repeated at least 5 times," explained senior Anne Klingeberger. Led by only four seniors, the Lady Indian runners managed to conquer the regional title. "After losing to Munster at sectionals, it felt great to beat them at regionals," voiced Tiffany Redlarczyk. "We were the ultimate underdogs going into the race, and it was awesome to prove everyone wrong," echoed sophomore Allison Couwenhoven. Led by individual winner Redlarczyk, the girls went on to place ninth at semi-state. Although most of their seasons ended there, Redlarczyk proceeded to the state competition where she received second place to Carmel's Katie Harrington.

Ask any member of the girls cross country team and she will say that there is more to the sport than just getting in shape.

"Always set a goal."

Cross Country team claims victory at regionals

Sophomore Susan Allegretti enjoyed the close friendships she made, as well as achieving an "excellent concept of competition." New to Lake Central, freshman Nancy Lesniewski felt that cross country helped her meet new people and adjust to high school better.

Klingeberger also added that cross-country contributed to friendships in all grades. Whether bonding at Brown County overnights or playing with juggling balls on the bus rides home, the team became closer than family. The girls achieved a keen ability to remain focused, a quality that helped them in their everyday lives. Hopes remain high for next year's season. Allegretti intends on participating in harder workouts, with her ultimate eye on the state competition. Seniors will miss the experiences, but leave with memories and advice. Lauren Kucera advises all girls to "do it for fun." Redlarczyk, an all-state runner, explained her basis for success by recommending others to "always set a goal" because it helps to stay focused. However, the best advice that anyone could give to future runners is to "not give up." This team of girls survived their brutal practice "tempos" to prove their critics wrong.

Volleyball spikes their way through sectionals

Knees skidded across the floor as the Girls Volleyball team prepared for their season. No one expected the Lady Indians to reach as far as they did after such a rocky start. Starting off with so many problems, most teams would have given up, but these Lady Indians did not.

The team overcame injuries, losing players, and their coaching staff becoming ill, to reach a season record of 28-7.

This year the team was led by seven seniors, and three captains; Shana Sporman, Laura Anderson, and Melissa Aguina. Melissa Aguina, the teams starting setter, and a varsity player for four years, was one of the most important elements in a winning season. With Melissa's sets and the spiking capabilities of the other seniors such as Shana, Laura, Christine, and Megan, the girls flew through their regular season and sectionals. Anything returned by the opposing team or that happened to get past the blocks of Bowman and Banas was quickly and effectively bumped up by the dedicated back row. It was this dedication that brought the Indians all the way to regionals.

The Lady Indians fought hard against

Penn in the regional match. Penn upset the Indians hard work and good season when they lost in three games. This was especially upsetting to the team since they beat Penn in the previous weekend at their own invitational.

"A lot of us have played together since Kahler, so it's been fun and unforgettable."

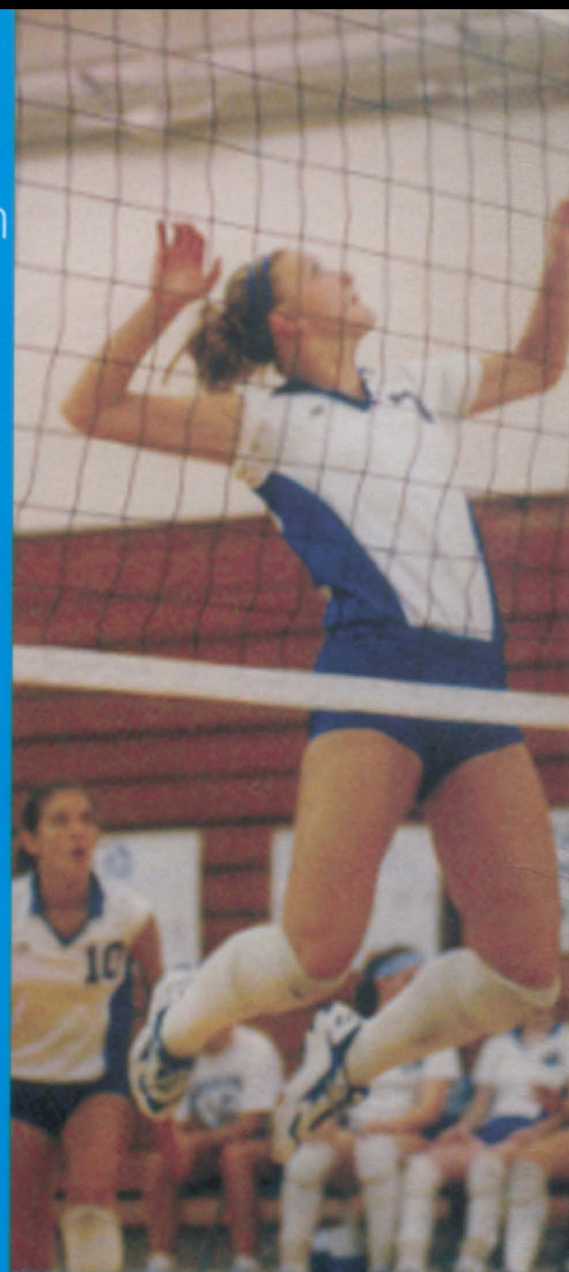

Shana Sporman

It was a sad note for the seniors to end their senior season on and for six of the seven seniors who have been playing together since the sixth grade to end their volleyball career. "A lot of us have played together since Kahler, so it's been fun and unforgettable," said Shana Sporman. For the most part, though, the season was filled with laughter and happiness. The Lady Indians loved playing together and had fun while they did.

The girls' fondest memory of the season was making a t-shirt with all of their inside jokes on it later on in the season. "We had a good season, we played well and we're all really close," Melissa Aguina said. All in all, the team pulled through a very impressive season and captured the 3rd consecutive sectional title for Lake Central.

Practice Makes Perfect

JV and freshmen fall sports: not yet varsity but just as important. JV team members gave their teams their all and it showed. The record of the JV boys' soccer team this year was 13 wins and 2 ties.

Joey Graham (10), a member of the JV soccer team said, "I'm glad we didn't lose our three-year winning streak." All of the JV teams practice just as hard, and some JV teams even practice with varsity.

"All year the JV and varsity football teams practiced together. There was no separation," said Derek Adamczyk (10).

Some players believe it is the level of seriousness that separates JV from varsity.

"JV is fun at practices and serious at games, where varsity is serious about everything," said Niki Carleton (10), a girls' soccer player. The JV girls' soccer team had so much fun in the season that they even had inside jokes.

With some players, age was what kept them from varsity. Freshmen players played on the freshmen team until some could prove that they could play with upperclassmen on varsity teams.

JV and freshman fall sports overcome difficulties

Janean Jumonville (9), a volleyball player said, "The freshmen volleyball team had a really good season this year, but because it's only the freshmen team we didn't get much recognition."

It doesn't matter if a player is freshmen, JV, or varsity; coaches treat all players the same. If the varsity team has a bad game, JV has to work just as hard as they do to improve. The girls' and boys' cross country teams did not have much separation between JV and varsity.

Christina Velasquez (10) said, "There's really not a certain JV and varsity team, there's just some people who run JV races." JV and freshmen sports do not always get the recognition they deserve. Many of the JV and freshmen players are working hard to try and make varsity in the years to come, but are still proud to be a part of any team.

Kyle Johnson (10) conditions in the gym after school for the spring baseball season. Kyle practices three or four times a week to get in shape to make the team. Kyle works the hardest on improving his hitting skills. Kyle was not on last years team, but is trying out for the team in the spring. Along with practicing after school, he also goes to Strike Zone to put more of his time into practice. "Training is very difficult," said Kyle. But practice makes perfect.

Samantha Keelan (10) practices for her traveling volleyball team called Synergy. She practices three times a week and every other weekend. There is also open gym every week in the summer to help her stay in shape. Samantha considers her traveling team her off season training. She is working on her vertical and getting stronger for next year's season. She considers it important to practice all year long so when next year comes she will be ready. "As long as we're a team we can do anything" says Samantha about next year.

Joseph Castor (10) putting time in his off season conditioning. Joe practices one day a week on Thursdays in the gym. Joe played one-doubles on the JV tennis team last year. He thinks that it is important to keep in shape for next year. Joe focuses on his forehand the most at practice. "I am working hard to improve for next years season," commented Joe. He has high hopes that the team will make it all the way to sectionals next year. He is working hard to help make that goal his junior year.

Scott Evanson (12) practices in the off season to keep conditioned for golf. Scott likes to focus on his short game. He feels that it is necessary to keep in shape for when golf season comes around in the spring. Golf takes so much concentration that Scott feels he needs to keep perfected. "It's going to be tough this year, so I have to up my chances for making the team next year."

Andy Balaz (9) is stretching out for the upcoming track season. Andy practices at Winter Warriors five days a week. This would be the first time for Andy to be on the track team. It is necessary to get in shape before the season because track is a demanding sport, it is easy to get injured so it is important to get your body in shape now before the season starts. Winter Warriors practices sprints and drills, along with hurdles. Many students participate in conditioning to stay in shape for their off season, or just the winter season.

Josh Hansen (10) shows off his ability in the weight room after school, conditioning for football season next year. Josh thinks that the most important thing that he needs to work on for next year is strengthening his arm muscles. Josh works out Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday after school in hopes to stay in shape for next year. He focuses most of his work out time on the bench press, clings, and squats. Football players find it necessary to keep in shape all year around so they can be ready for a great season next year.

The girls on the track team are training together for their season. They participate in the club called Winter Warriors. Winter Warriors practices Monday, Wednesday, and Friday after school, and Tuesday and Thursday before school. Boys and girls can both be a part of the club, and it is open to anyone who wants to just work out. They work mostly on drills, hurdles, and improving speed and indurance for the track season.

Cheerleaders show their competitive spirit

Flipping, cheering, and building human pyramids, this fall's cheerleaders practiced hard and it showed. Though a young team, they were still able to advance as far as the state finals. The cheerleaders' first competition was at Great America.

"Our warm-up was awesome," said Jessica Porter (10). The team placed second.

"We did well as a team for our time, but we didn't do our best," said Hillarie Smigel (12).

At regionals the team was more prepared; however the cheerleaders still couldn't meet their own standards.

"A lot of things we thought would go didn't," said Porter. Still, they got third and moved onto state.

The cheerleaders reached their high point at state.

"We did our best and we improved," said Traci Smitka (12).

"It was tough," said Porter. They managed to place eighth.

In addition to these competitions, the cheerleaders were still faithfully showing up and cheering for the football team in the worst of weather. They were at every game, no matter how cold it became.

The team was also very young. With only two seniors and a handful of juniors, the team had some great sophomores.

"It's cool but hard to be a leader," said Smitka.

Though the team was short on upperclassmen, they still had everything they needed to succeed.

"All the sophomores that moved up were really talented," said Amber Follmer (11).

While the cheerleaders admitted that they were a little weak on stunts and crowd appeal, everyone agreed that their tumbling was fantastic.

Overall the fall season went pretty well for the cheerleaders.

According to Smigel, "The season started fresh and new, but we came together as a team."

Boys' basketball dunks their way to a great season

The future was uncertain as the boys' varsity basketball took the floor for the first time. With the loss of four starters, but the return of seven seniors, no one was certain of how well the team would perform. Fortunately, the varsity team stood up to the challenge and proved all those doubtful to be wrong.

The senior squad led the team to many victories in the beginning of the season. The underclassmen on the team held their own as well as they, too, got playing time and contributed many points.

The Indians defeated many ranked teams and even went on to beat Andean, their biggest rival, 88-52. For many, the Andean game is one of the most important games in the boys' season. This was the last year LC and Andean would be playing each other in the big game. Next year, LC will join the Duneland Athletic Conference, which may prevent them from playing Andean because of the demanding conference schedule. This final win brought school spirit and bragging rights to all.

Adam "Dobbs" Dobrenzecki (12) said, "The Superfans this year really brought their A game, but they had a tough act to follow."

Superfans can play a big part of any team's successful season. The team had the talent to back up the crowd as Adam Diekman (12) and Adam Summers (12) led the team in three pointers. Standing 6'0 tall, Dobbs often grabbed rebounds.

The team suffered a blow halfway through the season with the departure of starter Garry Ruvoli (12). The team forged on and continued performing well, though the loss of Ruvoli was felt.

"The team pulled together in the middle of the season to win games," Dobrenzecki said. The boys ended their season with a 14-8 record.

Girls' basketball has a record to be proud of

The girls' varsity basketball team certainly had a lot to live up to this year. Winning every home game and earning a sectional victory were just two of the goals that the Lady Indians hoped to accomplish. Reaching this high standard would require a great deal of effort, and the girls were up for the challenge.

Losing just one of their home games meant that one of the goals that they pursued could not be attained. But this loss did not stop the team from playing their hardest. They ended the season with a record of 13-7. Although the Lady Indians did not reach their ultimate goal, they still completed a season they could be proud of.

"We didn't go as far as I thought we would in tournament time. We did play more as a team this year, though," said Brandi Shields (12).

A high point of the season came with a win against the team's biggest rivals, Crown Point. The ladies fought hard to defeat the Bulldogs 58-55. Coach Tom Megyesi felt that the girls performed exceptionally well that game.

"The girls played to their ability," he said. "They were intense and focused."

Other big rivals, Andrean and Highland, were at the top of the list of teams that the ladies hoped to beat. They followed through on this goal and won against both of the teams. They earned a win against Andrean with a score of 58-43 and beat Highland 45-41.

"When we played Highland, all the girls did really awesome. We had tons of intensity and played really well as a team," said Linsey Smith (11).

The girls kept their attitudes positive into the IHSAA tournament, where they narrowly lost to East Chicago Central in the opening round of play.

Boys prove them wrong at State

The boys' varsity swim team, led by new head coach Mr. Doug Burns, finished with a record of 4-5 this season. They also had four swimmers go to state. Their 20th-place finish at state surprised many, including some of the swimmers themselves.

"No one expected us to do that well," said Ryan Franklin (11).

The boys had a rough year because they had an inexperienced team. There were only five returning swimmers, making the other twelve swimmers new to the varsity team. Nick Krol (9) was one of the new swimmers to the team.

"It was hard being on varsity, but cool," he said.

The team practiced four days a week in the morning and five days a week in the afternoon. They also had two-hour Saturday practices when they did not have meets.

Coach Burns said, "I have gotten less sleep this year as head coach and it has been challenging, but enjoyable."

The young team trained hard and earned the respect of their new coach.

"They developed a lot of depth this season and the team looks good for next year," he said.

The team performed well this season, and although they placed a disappointing second at sectionals, they redeemed themselves at the state competition. Two individuals, Franklin and Dave Nagdeman (12) and two relays advanced to finals competition.

With a veteran team returning next year, Coach Burns and his swimmers are quite optimistic for the upcoming year.

"We hope to do better and we will have a stronger team," said Franklin.

This season has been a learning experience that members will use as a building block for future success.

Girls' swimming crushes all opposition

The girls' swim team kicked off the season with much confidence.

"We had a very, very successful season," said head coach Jim Tonkovich.

"Practice was fun this year. We pushed each other really hard," said Sarah Conley (12).

The team dominated in the regular season, beating schools left and right. The team suffered only one loss, and won most dual meets or placed high in invites.

At sectionals the team crushed all competition by coming first in every event and advancing many individuals to state. The swimmers were pleased with their performances.

"I did really well," said Conley. "I swam my best time on sectionals. It was my best this year."

At state many girls swam spectacular races, and many had their best times of the year. The team tied the school record for state scoring, racking up 170 points.

"We expected to do better at state, though, but it was really competitive and everyone got their best times anyway," said Stephanie Moon (10).

"Everyone swam great, and we were happy with our placings," said Jen Wright (11) and Rachel Sitarz (12).

"It helped that Tonk was in a good mood," added Maureen Bona (11).

The team did so well that The Times mistakenly said that they were the best boys swim team in the area.

The team had many underclassmen, many of whom went to state and made All-American.

The team had seven All-Americans this season: Rachel Sitarz (12), Kate Mitchell (12), Jen Wright (11), Aubrette Biegel (10), Maureen Bona (11), Stephanie Moon (10), and Liz Nagdeman (10).

The team also came together to support each other. "There's a lot more encouragement this year," said Moon.

Boys wrestle their way to state finals

Starting the season off with four returning state-qualified seniors, it was almost too good to be true. The Indians succeeded on capturing individual sectional and regional titles as seniors Austin Torres, Luke Triveline, Justin Mora and Josh Morgan led their team to an impressive record of 13-5.

If anything, the wrestling team was dedicated. Hard work and effort was put in this season through grueling practices after school and on the weekends. Cutting weight and early practices were what a devoted wrestler had to overcome.

"It was hard work, but it was all worth it when I took third at State," said Austin Torres (12).

Coaches Bob Emerick, Andy Trevino, and Scott Hilyard guided the boys into a good work ethic. With the help from these experienced coaches came one of the best records Lake Central has ever seen. Three seniors placed at state; Luke Triveline came in 7th, Austin Torres placed third, and Justin Mora earned second. The varsity wrestlers did not take their coaching staff for granted and thanked them for their assistance in becoming a top team in the state.

"My biggest accomplishment this season was having 37 pins," said state qualified wrestler Luke Triveline (12).

Many memories were created during this season.

"My best memory of the season were the bus rides back home after tournaments and eating coolers worth of food after each meet, along with the rest of the team," said Torres.

Triveline said, "The funniest moment of the season was when Austin cried because Coach Hilyard yelled at him in practice."

The wrestling team finished their thrilling season with a dual meet record of 13-5. It could not have been done without the team of talented wrestlers and their skilled coaching staff.

If there is one word to describe this year's Lake Central hockey team, it would be dedicated. The team was committed to each other and the practices held forty-five minutes away at Bridgeview.

Captain Bart Ventimiglia (12) led the team. He shared his responsibilities with assistant captains Jim Porter (12) and Matt Twardy (11). Together the three proved to be good leaders by making the underclassmen feel like important components of the varsity team. All agreed the team had great camaraderie towards one another.

"We all get along for sure; the senior leadership really helps out," said Brad Newell (11).

Having a close team helped them work well with each other out on the ice. Twice a week the team hauled loads of equipment to Bridgeview for practice. Practice wasn't the only far-off destination for the team; they had to travel to games, which were usually held at Homewood Flossmoor or

Hockey team skates their way to state

Orland Park. But the team certainly didn't mind traveling to its state. The entire team had a positive outlook on the way they hoped to perform.

Before the competition, goalie Nick Napier (10) said, "I'm looking forward to state and feel we have a very good chance at winning this year."

This positive attitude translated into a victory at state. The teams' success was owed in great part to the hard work and dedication of first year Coach Tim Philbin.

He commented on the season: "Wow! What a season it's been so far. We started out as eighteen individual hockey players, but we needed to learn to be a team."

With a new coach, dedicated players, and a positive outlook, the team had a lot to look forward to. The 2003 season proved to be rewarding for everyone on the team; the season ended on a high note as they skated their way to victory at the state tournament in Fort Wayne.

their best

JV winter sports have come a long way this year. Throughout the season, the JV swimming, basketball, and wrestling teams have improved tremendously.

The JV boys' basketball team had a record of 14-6. They had a great season, hope to continue this success next year. Jovan Alavanja (10), Jon Maida (10), Jeremy Doolin (10), Zack Bero (10), and Mike Crnocrak (10) were key contributors.

"This was a fun group of kids to be around," said Coach David Milausnic.

JV girls' basketball also had a positive season; the girls were able to perfect their skills in hopes of earning a spot on the varsity squad the next season.

The JV girls' and boys' swimming and diving teams had a rocky start due to new coaching and a young group of swimmers.

Fortunately, they got into the swing of things right away and bonded with the new coach. After much conditioning and strong practices, things became easier for everyone.

The experience that the JV swimmers have earned will help them to make bigger contributions to the team in the future.

The JV wrestling had a good season this year. Their main goal throughout the season was improvement, and continually tried their best. The outlook for next year will be good. These guys were very determined this season and always put forth their best effort.

As far as all of the JV teams this year, as you can see, there has been a lot of improvement, and the outlook is good for next year. As long as these athletes continue to practice and be determined, they will continually do well.

The Westlake program has provided a variety of opportunities for its participants. Activities like sports and crafts keep the excitement alive.

Westlake keeps its students involved in many activities. They are active in sports like volleyball, kickball, basketball, and softball, to name a few. Students involved in Westlake are able to get together and play bingo and other games that help out with some of their school subjects. These students don't participate solely in sports; arts and crafts are also popular.

Ms. Debbie Stack talked to us about the student involvement in the Westlake program. She has taught the Westlake students many of their arts and crafts skills.

"I enjoy being able to teach the students new arts and craft skills. We have so much fun with it," she said.

The students in Westlake created a number of projects, including many different kinds of furniture. A number of these pieces were hand painted using different varieties of stamps and stencils.

Megan Mazur (12), one of the Westlake students, said, "Some of the projects, which we created, were hand painted tables and chairs."

Most of the projects have been raffled off with their proceeds going toward planning class trips. Other proceeds are sent to the American Cancer Society. All of their projects have turned out phenomenal and are magnificent works of art.

Boys' golf team swings through another great season

The boys' golf team had a fantastic season. They faced some of the toughest opponents in their district and came out on top. They defeated such adversaries as Andean and Munster, two of the top-ranked teams in the area. Their one expectation as a team was to go to state.

This year the team ended with a record of 15-3. They were defeated only by Munster, Merrillville, and Mishawaka.

"We had a great 9-hole season and are finally turning the corner in our 18-hole game. But our real goal is to qualify for state. Last year we were short by one stroke," said Coach Tim Powers.

This year's strong team is expected to continue their winning streak well into the next season. The young team has high expectations for the next season.

"My goal for next year is the same as this year's was: to go to state," said Keith Opat (11).

Mr. Powers' outlook for the future is bright. "My top seven players are two seniors and five juniors, so we're going to return five good players, especially Opat and [Jim] Matura. We've had a good season and we will have a good year next year," he said.

The team went into to sectionals with high hopes. They were expected to win the competition, but placed a disappointing third. Still, the golfers advanced to regionals. Unfortunately, team members did not play to their full potential and failed to earn a ticket to the state finals.

Senior Jay Hendron said, "We thought we would take home sectionals, and we had hopes to make it to state, but the team as a whole had a really poor day at regionals."

Though the team didn't make it as far as they had hoped, an outstanding record of 15-3 is no reason to hang their heads.

Varsity baseball team hits their way to a winning record

While other teams would have been disappointed with an initial record of 2-3, the Indians refused to let the poor start stop them. The team's true colors were shown as they embarked upon a 14-game winning streak.

"The team has the ability to put up a ton of runs as long as they keep in focus that winning is the key," said head coach Mr. Todd Iwema.

The Indians did more than just win the fourteen games. They buried most of their opponents by at least ten runs.

"We are really starting to show how good we can be. We have already won some big games and as long as we keep focus, we will keep the winning streak we have going alive," said Garry Ruvoli (12).

Seniors such as Ruvoli and Adam Summers, among many others, provided the team with shining leadership. They showed a great example of the attitude expected of each individual. The senior class displayed an impressive amount of dedication to the team and the game of baseball in general. They taught their fellow Indians important lessons about teamwork.

"One thing that is impressive about many of the players on the team is that their goal is to achieve victory rather than to pad their own stats," explained Coach Iwema.

With six of eight defensive starters, all designated hitters, and every pitcher from last year's squad returning, the team came into their season with high expectations.

Justin Butler (12) said, "This season was great because I played with 14 other seniors and we all became really close through our four years together."

In post season they defeated Lowell to get out of sectionals, and then moved on to regionals and defeated Crown Point. At semi-state they played against Brownsburg and were defeated. With a final score of 1 to 4, the Indians' superb season came to a close.

As the Lady Indians took the field in their season opener, they knew that they had a reputation to uphold as defending state champions.

The girls started the season at the Boonville tournament and finished the weekend with a 2-1 record. Their loss was to Castle, the team that had defeated them two years ago in the Final Four at the state tournament.

Fortunately, the team did not allow the loss to get them down; they turned it into something positive. Learning from the mistakes they had made in the game, the girls went on to enjoy a season full of victory.

Just a few weeks later, the Indians faced their toughest rivals: the Andean Fifty-Niners. The game was an all-out pitcher's duel. After 15 innings of play, the game was still tied at 1-1. The umpires called the game due to darkness, and Coach Keith Hauber later revealed that the game would not be completed.

"We really wanted to beat Andean since they are our rivals, and we were all upset when we found out we wouldn't get a chance to finish the game," said Kim Stauffer (12).

Halfway through the season the girls had an amazing record of 18-2-1. The team hoped to continue their success and looked forward to tournament play and defending their state title.

The Indians continued to dominate the state softball scene and secured a sectional victory when they defeated E.C. Central. They advanced to regionals and beat Mishawaka in the final game.

At semi-state they defeated Pendleton Heights and were on their way to the state championship. The Lady Indians fell short their last game and lost to Center Groove by one run. Though the team did not secure a second consecutive state title, the seniors were left with memories that would last a lifetime.

Hurdle, Jump, Sprint

Practice, hurdles, field events, competition, and long distance are all words that come to mind when one hears the word "track." Track is a fun but sometimes challenging sport, and the members of the boys' track team were up to the task.

The boys track team proved to have a successful season this year. With the majority of their meets being wins, the coach, was pleased with their performance.

Head coach Mr. Rudy Skorupa said, "We're running with a lot of underclassmen; thus far but they are doing very well and we're looking forward to a good turnout at sectionals."

Being on the track time involves a significant time commitment. Team members practice every day after school and also on Saturday mornings. There are usually two or three meets per week. Once the regular season winds down and the team gets closer to sectionals, they must practice extra hard so they can further improve their times and

Track team runs their way towards success distances and maybe even advance to regionals or state.

Kyle Ramsy (12) found track to be a very positive experience.

"I enjoy participating in track because I can be part of a team, help them, and having the team support me makes me feel important," he said.

Others like taking part in track because they make unforgettable memories, have great times, and even make inside jokes.

Being on the track team also helps keep student athletes in shape. They must run every day regardless of whether they do long distance, sprints, relays, or field events.

After a season of conditioning,, they were ready for sectional competition. The team won sectionals. The 4X400 Relay, 4X800 Relay, 300 Intermediate Hurdles, 110 High Hurdles were individual winners of the meet. The majority of the team advanced to regionals. At regionals, the 4X400 Relay, 300 Intermediate Hurdles, 110 High Hurdles, and Discuss made it to the state finals.

Girls' track team emerges as one of Region's best

The girls' track team began conditioning in October with Fall Fanatics for a jump-start into the season and continued through the winter with Winter Warriors until the beginning of the actual season in March. The girls kicked off their season on March 3rd with a win against Clark, Crown Point, and Gavitt.

At the beginning of the year, Coach Ron Fredrick told his team that they deserved to be recognized as one of the top programs in the state. The girls were well on their way to realizing this goal as they defeated fifth-ranked Valparaiso and seventh-ranked Carmel during the year.

Many Indians credited their team's success with an overall attitude improvement.

"We were really untied as a team. This season was a lot of hard work, but everyone on the team was really encouraging and we pushed each other to do our best, which is why I think we did so well this year," said Vanessa Kobza (11).

"We pushed each other to do our best."

The season also proved to be a record-breaking one. The team finished with the best record in LC girls' track history, and many individuals broke school records. Mary Kate Conway (10) beat the record for the 100 meter dash and freshman Rachel Vandergenugten (9) broke the 100 m hurdles record.

After ending their regular season with only two losses, the girls continued their dominance. The team won its twelfth consecutive sectional and 20 members advanced to regional competition.

The Lady Indians performed well at regionals, earning a fourth place finish. Advancing to state became a realistic dream for some of the girls. The spotlight at state was focused on the girls 4x800 relay team as they overcame their expectations of traveling to state. "The whole team deserved to make it to state. It was the best season we ever had!" said Becky Hart (10).

Point, Set, Match

Tennis season began in the freezing cold month of March and ended in the scorching hot month of June. This drastic climate change can represent the tennis team's progression throughout the season. As the weather began to heat up, so did the team. They began the season with close losses to Chesterton and Andrean, then suffered a 3-2 loss to longtime rival Munster.

The team bounced back with solid wins against Merrillville and Highland. Team members believe those victories were the product of increased team bonding, pasta parties and an overnight trip to a tournament in Crawfordsville, IN, where they took second place. The tourney brought the girls closer and boosted team morale.

"My favorite part of the school year is definitely during the tennis season. Even though practices are laid back, we still work really hard. I love all the girls and as a team, we know how to have fun," said Tina Morgan (11).

Girls' tennis team remains solid through team unity

Leading the team as the number one singles player for the second year in a row, captain Carrie Rachon (12) played well all season, winning close matches against Portage and West Lafayette. Carrie credits the teams' as well as her own success to the mutual love between her teammates.

"Of all the sports teams, I think that we mesh together the best."

Carrie Rachon

"The tennis team definitely has one of the most diverse groups in LC, but out of all the sports teams, I think that we mesh together the best," she said.

No strangers to victory, the number one doubles team of Tina Morgan (11) and Jenny Klemme (12) overcame the obstacles of being partners for the first time to help lead to the team to victory. Singles players Greer Robison and Kerri Jeziorski also contributed to the teams surprising accomplishments.

Andrea Blesich (12) was able to sum up the team's year in a few words:

"We won big matches, scored well against strong teams, and overall we have had a great season."

Pride, Hustle, Desire

Freshman and JV sports Spring into action

The weeks of conditioning and early morning practices are over, and you wait with a crowd of peers for the coach to post the list. As you push your way through the mass of people, you see your name on the JV roster.

Being part of a crowded school forces athletes to work that much harder to be part of a team. Many students realize what a difficult task it is to make a varsity sport and are content making the JV team.

"I knew that as a freshman it wasn't likely that I would make varsity, but I would rather play JV first, just to get used to how things work," said Amy Couwenhoven (9).

Many athletes look upon their years at the JV level as a way of getting used to the system and figuring out their place on the team or in the program. These younger students deserve recognition for their work.

The JV softball team was a very young team, consisting of mainly freshmen. The team was not, however, inexperienced.

"I was really happy to make JV as a freshman."

Ryan Frost

Many of the girls had played travel ball in the summer, and others were the stars of their town teams.

The JV and freshman baseball teams started out the season with winning records and sustained the momentum throughout the season.

"I was really happy to make JV as a freshman because not many freshmen make the JV team," said baseball player Ryan Frost (9).

Both the boys' and girls' track teams were also very successful. The variety of underclassmen provided strong support to the varsity athletes. Some were even included on their team's sectional roster.

The girls' tennis team also came out wanting to win, and JV team members were ready to face any challenge thrown at them.

Freshman and JV sports provided athletes with the opportunity to improve. Look for their members to make a difference on the varsity squads in the future.

MVP's

Leadership...

Dedication ...

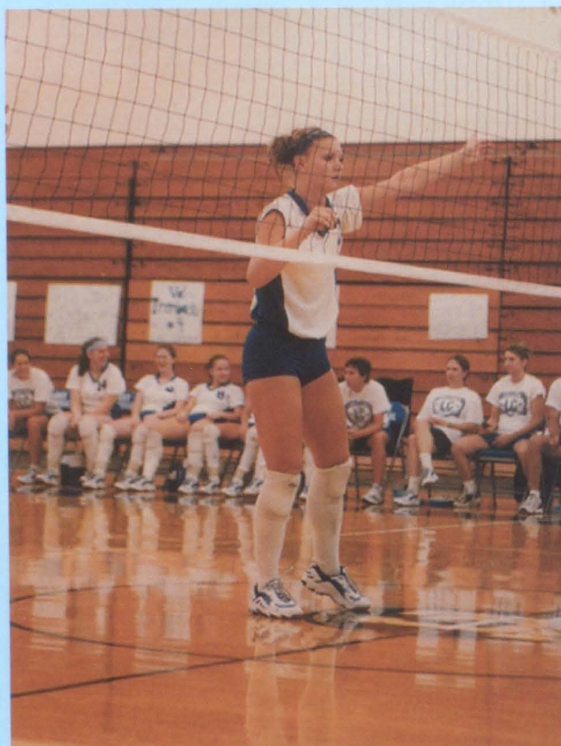

Perfection...

Brandi Shields (12) had a successful last season in girls' varsity basketball her senior year. "I did pretty well this season. We all came together and worked as a team." Brandi has been playing basketball for eight or nine years and feels that all that time put in has helped to get her where she is today. Her best memory from her last season was all the team bonding. Team bonding is an important element in having a good season, and that proved true this year. Brandi says that she choose to play basketball because she has enjoyed playing ever since she was little, and it helps to keep her in shape. Some athletes have plans on continuing playing their sport in college. Brandi has some different plans for college other then basketball. "I don't plan on continuing to play basketball because I plan on playing softball in college." Even though Brandi won't be participating in basketball next year, she will carry all her memories with her to college.

Brian Kaluf (11) has been running track fo the past three years and had a very successful season. He first started running track to stay in shape for football. This year Brian set two school records in hurdle events and a sectional record. At regionals, Brian ran the anchor leg of the 4x400 meter relay team that placed second with a time of 3:23. He qualified for the state meet in three events. Kaluf plans to continue running track his senior year at LC and hopefully will continue in college.

Megan Bowman (12) had an excellent season in volleyball this year. She helped the varsity volleyball team win sectionals and many tournaments. Megan says that she chose to play volleyball because of her coach, Mr. Bill Gray. She said, "He was always the best player I knew and still had fun with it." She says that this season was the most fun she has had playing volleyball because of the team unity and development. "It's exciting to be named the MVP of the volleyball team, but it is more of a team sport. You cannot get anywhere without your teammates." Megan plans on playing volleyball at the University of Michigan, where she received a full ride scholarship.

Tiffany Redlarczyk (12) has been running cross country for the past seven years of her life. Tiffany started running because she found out that she had a God-given talent for it. This season she individually won sectionals, regionals, and semi-state, which she considers her most memorable moment of this season. She also placed 2nd at state finals. On being named the MVP of cross country, Tiffany said, "All of the hard work paid off. I thank God for keeping me healthy and strong these past years." She will be attending the University of Arkansas on a full-ride scholarship for both cross country and track.

Nick Napier (10) is the goalie and MVP of the state champion hockey team. He has been playing hockey for LC for two years. He decided to be on the team because of his friends. This year, his most memorable moment was when they won the state title. Overall, he felt the team played well some games and not so well for others. Nick credits some of his success to his outstanding defense: "I couldn't have done it without them!"

Geoff Walker (12) was voted the MVP of the football team. He has been playing football for six years, four of them at LC. Geoff loves playing football because it allows full contact. He feels that he, personally, could have played better this year, but still had some great games. Geoff said, "I plan on playing football at Wabash because they have a winning tradition and are an academically well-known college." He is grateful to be named the MVP because it takes a lot of time and a lot of passion to be the MVP of a sport.

Dave Nagdeman (12) has been swimming for twelve years, and is the boys' swimming MVP. According to Dave, "I started swimming when I was six, so I am not quite sure why I started swimming." This year he had a good season. At state, he was seventh in the 100 Freestyle, fourteenth in the 50 Freestyle, and on the Medley Relay and 200 Free Relay, which both finished in the top sixteen. Also, he won his first ever individual event, the 100 Freestyle, at sectionals. His most memorable moment was when Clint hit Hossie, aka Jamie Hellman, with a garbage can. He will continue his swimming career at the University of Pennsylvania. On the team's success and being named MVP, Dave said, "I wouldn't have it any other way."

BEHIND THE SCENES

Take a look at the hidden world behind the scenes of LC

Of the many people that go to LC games, plays, and other special events, few ever stop to think about the people behind the scenes. Many of the most important figures in sports and plays go unnoticed. The coaches, managers, and other hidden voices all hold influential roles in their respective sport or activity.

Trainers and managers can make or break a team.

"We get the equipment ready and tape wrists. We try to prevent injuries. When injuries do happen we do what we can to help subside the pain," said Rachel Eggebrecht (11).

Rachel assisted the football team, but many other sports have managers as well. Wrestling and basketball both have managers to help their teams.

Sports are not the only activities with unknown people working hard to make things come together. Without the resourceful stage crew, not one play or musical could have been produced. Microphones would not have been placed, lights would not have been turned on, and costumes would not have been made. In other words, students would not have heard, seen, or had a chance of being convinced by the plays without the crew.

Melissa Wartak (11), a stage crew manager, kept the crew in line.

"I make sure all the techies do what they are supposed to," she said.

An especially skilled makeup team was a must for Frankenstein this year. Ryan Perisin (10) managed to create realistic monster makeup while memorizing lines for a role in the play.

"I was Harry in the play, and I did makeup with Mr. Neth. Makeup was really complicated," he said.

Like Ryan, many other crew members volunteered to perform double duties. Mirissa Krukowski (9) helped the Frankenstein production in a dual capacity.

"I worked light board and follow spot," she said.

Managers in Science Olympiad were a first this year that was immediately appreciated.

"The managers basically go around and help us on the regular team," said Corey Ross (10).

These new managers helped Science Olympiad and will continue to benefit the team.

Those involved in the behind the scenes work of football, soccer, plays, and Science Olympiad have worked hard to make a difference from behind the glow of the limelight.

ARTISTS IN TRAINING

PAINTS, PASTELS & PALETTES

The artwork students have displayed throughout the halls for all to see, but very few fellow classmates realize the true effort put into each project.

Many levels of art were offered to students including various levels of basic art, painting, computer graphics, and 3D art. Art I was a prerequisite required in order to advance to any higher level.

One artist, Megan Towe (12), participated in many of the classes.

"I took the classes because I've always had a passion for art, and I have been thinking about a career in graphic design," she said.

Certain artworks were chosen to be displayed in various art shows in the region, including shows in South Bend, Valparaiso, and in the Center for the Visual and Performing Arts in Munster. To be chosen for these shows each project had to meet certain criteria set by the four art teachers, Mr. Paul Volk, Ms. Sandy Bushong, Ms. Maureen Yager, and Ms. Christine Gray. Every piece had to look professional and realistic, and be of high quality. The teachers also looked for creativity, design, and hands-on skill. After the entries were sent into the contest, exhibition was not guaranteed to anyone.

Mr. Paul Volk said, "We chose our ten best pieces to send in, and then the final decisions were made by the judges of the show. Just because we sent in ten pieces did not assure that ten would make it to the final rounds of the contest. All ten of our pieces could be exhibited, or we could have only one chosen."

Fundraisers were offered to sponsor different activities. The money raised helped to pay for field trips to the art museums in Chicago and extra supplies not covered under the school's budget.

Each class offered a variety of opportunities for students to convey their artistic abilities. Many students enjoyed completing the stained glass project, the panel piece project, and the cubism project.

Marisol Arellano (10) said, "I heard art was really hands on, so it was my chance to express my creativity."

MOLDING LIFE INTO ART

UNIQUE IDEAS MOLD MASTERPIECES

Creative thinking, patience, motivation, and experimentation are what Crafts and Jewelry and ceramics classes are about. Every day students look forward to getting their hands on some clay and just getting dirty. Others prefer to shape metal or cut, solder, and paint glass. Lake Central offer two hands-on programs that students can take part in. Students who never knew they had artistic abilities are surprised and excited with the outcome of their creativity.

"Ceramics is relaxing; it takes concentration and a lot of time, but in the end it's all worth it!" said Monica Walker (11).

Instead of enduring anxiety and headaches, students feel free to unwind and discover their creative capabilities. Ceramics offers a variety of different projects for the students to make, such as cups, bowls, vases, pots, and anything else the students can mold their clay into.

"I love making gifts for people. It's all about the clay!" said Brandi Shields (12).

"I wasn't into arts and crafts until this class. All of our hard work paid off with cute projects," Andrea Copado (12) said of her Crafts and Jewelry class.

Students can create a variety of different projects in class, including rings, glass ornaments, nightlights, and other jewelry. Unlike other regular classes where students are always told what to do and exactly how to do it, this class encourages everyone to think up their own ideas, design them, and create them on their own.

"I like to challenge the intelligence of my students, and I like them to use their imagination and creativity," said Crafts and Jewelry teacher Mr. Volk.

This does not mean Mr. Volk does not help his students. He is involved with each and every project and helps point all of his students in the right direction. Mr. Volk makes the class enjoyable and welcomes everyone who wants to take part in Crafts and Jewelry class.

Stressing about homework and term papers are not part of these classes. All that is required is creativity, effort, and a sense of fun.

DANCE... DANCE... DANCE!

DANCING QUEENS TAKE NATIONALS

The talented girls on the Centralette team know that with a positive attitude, mental dedication, and a goal in mind, anything can happen. They endured 2 and-a-half hours of intense practice every day to maintain their reputation as one of the top dance teams in the nation.

In past years, all members of Centralettes had to perform flags, pom, and jazz. This season, senior members had the option of not doing flags.

In their off time, the four seniors, Lindsay Lotshaw, Coutney Shaughnessy, Ericka Mazer, and Megan Towe, practiced an ensemble in memory of departed former team members Christina Chakonas and Diana Kakidas. They danced a beautiful routine to the song "Good Friend" by Nine Days.

When November came around, a new choreographer provided the team with an extremely difficult routine. Varsity Centralettes went to the state dance championships and placed first in the pom category and second in the jazz category. Their main rival, Floyd Central (who are UDA national pom champions), defeated the Centralettes in the jazz category.

JV Centralettes placed first in the pom and jazz category.

Erika Mazer (12) said, "State was harder then Nationals. Winning pom was a shock because Floyd Central just won their Nationals in pom. Getting second in jazz was a bit of a let down but also a great relief. We lost to a talented team, so it was an honor."

The season came to an end for the Centralettes when they traveled to Orlando for Nationals. The team finished first in jazz and second in pom.

ALL BECAUSE OF AGATHA & FRANKENSTEIN

FALL PLAYS BRING TWISTS OF HORROR

Two fall plays were offered for our diverse crowd: All Because of Agatha and Frankenstein. Both plays were performed multiple times, allowing every opportunity for LC students to get a taste of both.

All Because of Agatha takes place in Salem, MA where the witch trials took place. Agatha is a witch who was burned at the stake. Every year, between Halloween and November 28, she comes back to haunt the house that she lived in. The new owners of the house experience supernatural happenings and decide to throw a party for her. In the end, they eventually get rid of Agatha.

The six students with lead rolls in Agatha had twice as much work, as they had to switch between two parts each week.

"It was very stressful, a lot more work obviously, but in the end it was a very rewarding experience," said Justin Riordan (12).

Though they had to devote extra time to learning their parts, Agatha thespians were still able to have fun.

"I couldn't get the drawer open in a dresser to throw a piece of celery across the stage at someone because the drawer was stuck, so I took something off the top and threw it instead," said Shannon Williams (11).

Nick Poteres (12) said, "I liked to make jokes, and when I got on stage, I got hit on the head by the actresses as a sort of payback."

The play Frankenstein differs from the monster movie that many people may be familiar with. Both versions feature a scientist who creates a monster that goes mad and starts attacking people. In this production, however, Victor Frankenstein, the scientist, goes crazy himself when he fails to give his creation a bride and it begins to kill people.

Frankenstein allowed many actors and actresses the chance to have a lead role for the first time in their high school careers.

"It was my first lead roll instead of being an extra," said Rachael Sharp (12).

This year's two fall plays offered new opportunities, great memories, and excellent entertainment.

BELLS ARE RINGING

BELLS RING ALL YEAR LONG

Ever wonder what kind of musical options are available outside of choir and band? Hand bells are another alternative for music lovers. As more students see bells as a musical option, the bell choir keeps growing. The school now offers three different levels of bell choirs.

According to Mrs. Hobbs, the Bells II teacher, "We are the only school corporation in the county to offer bells as an accredited class. We are lucky to have an administration who is so supportive of our class."

The levels start with Bells I, the beginning level, and continue on to Bells III, the advanced level.

Emily Sasaki (12), who has been playing bells for the past three years and is currently in Bells III, said "At first it's difficult but you get used to it really fast."

The bells vary in weight. The smallest one is about 12 ounces and the biggest one is 10 pounds. The variation in weight cause different sounds. Different techniques are used to make unique sounds.

Andrea Cohen (11) said, "Different techniques may not be in a piece you've ever played and then suddenly they appear."

The bells vary in size, which means that they will sound different. The larger the bell, the deeper the sound. When playing the bells, the musicians who play smaller bells often have one to two bells in each hand. Playing two bells in one hand can be difficult because there can be some confusion as to which bell should be played.

"When I first started playing the smaller bells, it was hard because I had more than one bell in each hand. Eventually I got it and now it is easy to play two at once," said Greer Robison (12).

There are many different reasons why people take bells.

"It looked like a very fun and unique instrument to play," said Marissa Tomasic (12).

Bells is a class commonly favored by the female gender, but in the crowd of girls, one male face has stood out over the past two years. Bryan Arnold (10) is the only male in the three classes of bells. Arnold considers himself very lucky to perform music with this group.

"What guy wouldn't want to be surrounded by a group of girls?" he said.

As the year came to a quick end, the bell choir lost Mr. Lewis as their director. Mr. Lewis taught Bells I and Bells III.

Cohen remarked, "Although Mr. Lewis has only been my teacher for a year, I will miss him. He knows a lot about music and gives constructive criticism, which are two key characteristics of a bell teacher."

As bell choir members rang the last notes of the school year, many of them reminisced about memories that they have had over the years with Mr. Lewis as their director. Mr. Lewis will be missed by the bells classes, and they all thank him for his energy and dedication.

CHOIRS SING THEIR GOODBYES

MR. LEWIS LEAVES ON A HIGH NOTE

This was Mr. Lewis's last year directing the choirs. He has been in charge of choir for the last 20 years. Even though he is leaving, he has left a lasting impression on many students past and present.

Whether Mr. Lewis has taught students music when they had no idea how to read it, bells when they had no idea how to play them, or life lessons that they will remember forever, he has made a huge impact.

With four concerts and the ISSMA contest, the choirs kept busy. They practiced nonstop during class and in the end, all the hard work paid off. The biggest concert of the year was the Christmas concert. Nearly every year, the Christmas concert sells out due to popular demand of tickets. This year, a few students bought nearly twenty tickets.

Emily Sasaki (12) bought seventeen while Angela Casas (12) bought nineteen.

"A lot of my family and friends wanted to come to see the concert and support me," Sasaki said.

One of the main things that the audience enjoyed was the finale of the concert. All of the choirs and bells got together and sang "The Hallelujah Chorus" as a group.

Lisa Alessandri (12) said, "The song sounds really great and I think everyone enjoys the music."

The general and show choirs enjoyed showing off to their family, friends, and community during their concerts.

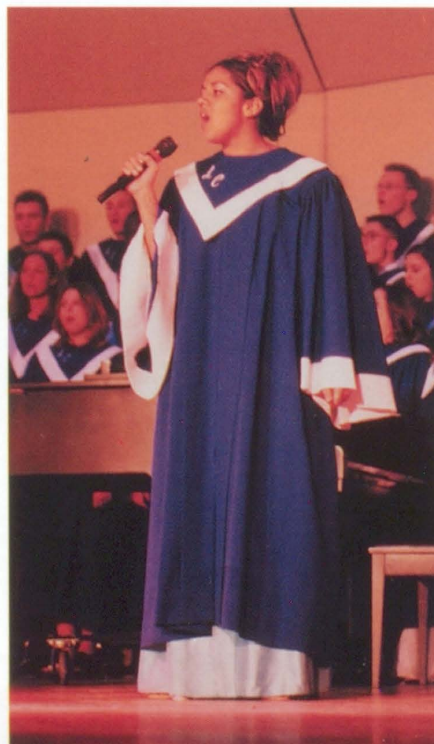

All four choirs did extremely well at this year's ISSMA contest. All received a first place category for singing while Concert and Senior Treble choir also placed first in site reading, a requirement. Mr. Lewis was very proud of their performance. "I was very pleased with the results, especially in the toughest section-site reading. I'm happy to be retiring with such a great year and such outstanding choirs. I will miss working with the kids and teachers," said Mr. Lewis.

With Junior Treble, Varsity, Senior Treble and Concert choirs, choir was very full. Along with all of the hard work came fun times and unforgettable memories. The choir will miss Mr. Lewis dearly. With his departure, Mrs. Hobbs will step up to take his position. The choir looks forward to her rising up and what she has to bring with to offer the choir. All choir members wish the best of luck to Mr. Lewis in his endeavors over the next years.

ALL WE DO IS SING & DANCE

SHOW CHOIRS KEEP THE BEAT

Being in one of the top two choirs required hard work and perseverance to learn three to four songs for each concert. Imagine being in one of the two extracurricular choirs and learning additional songs with choreography. The Counterpoints, a mix of boys and girls, and the Trebleaires, an all girl show choir, were mainly made up of new members, but the two groups worked hard to maintain their great performance reputation.

The Counterpoints began their season on a solemn note at Chapel Lawn Cemetery on September 11th. They sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and other American pride songs in remembrance of those who perished a year before. The experience for the group was different from usual performances.

"It made us feel patriotic and feel a new love for the country," said Amy Kiral (12). "You think about the songs you are singing, and it brings new light to certain situations."

The two groups also performed at the annual fall, Christmas, classic, and spring concerts during the year.

The Counterpoints had a busy holiday season. The group was asked to perform at the Star Plaza on December 6 with country singer Jodee Messina.

"I never really heard of her, but I was excited to sing with someone famous," said J.T. Eagan (11).

The group also performed at Andorra Restaurant, nursing homes, Briar Ridge Country Club, Brumm's Bloomin' Barn, and St. Margaret's Hospital.

The Trebleaires sang at various places during the holiday season as well. The group sang at the Performing Arts Center, Chapel Lawn, and at St. Mike's and Bibich Elementary School.

"The holiday season was the most fun because we got to dress up in our formals, and we got to go to places out of school," said Emily Waggoner (11).

After all the hustling and bustling of the holiday season, the two groups focused on their preparation for ISSMA. Members from both groups also performed in the solo and ensemble divisions. The ensemble division enabled members of the two show choirs to perform with other members of the Lake Central Chorus department. The Counterpoints and Trebleaires all represented the school well at ISSMA by earning a first place ranking.

A YEAR OF MUSIC

CONCERTS END ON A GOOD NOTE

Throughout the year, band and choir displayed their ability to perform. Both groups spent many hours during the year perfecting their skills to provide an exceptional year of excellent music.

The Percussion and Jazz bands participated in the marching band season and played in the Valentine's Day Concert. Wind and Symphonic bands provided music for both the Winter and Spring Concerts. The choir was also involved in many concerts such as the Fall, Christmas, Spring and Classics Concerts. Throughout the year choir members prepared for the ISSMA contest in April. The choirs sung their competitive pieces at the Classics Concert and competed against regional schools in the area at ISSMA. Proving that practice makes perfect, all of the choirs earned first place scores.

The Spring Concert was Mr. Mike Lewis's final performance. He has been a hard-working teacher and an inspiration to those he has taught. During the year all of the choirs donated money for a gift for Mr. Lewis. With the money the choir purchased a four-day, three-night vacation to Las Vegas. They raised enough money to provide a trip for both Mr. Mike Lewis and Mr. Paul Lowe, a theater teacher who retired two years ago. The two received the gift at the Spring Concert. This was an emotional concert for both the students and Mr. Lewis.

Hours and hours of practice have made a successful year for all of LC's musical groups. Choir and band members can look proudly back on a year filled with memories and music.

MARCHING To The BEAT

EASTER SYMPHONY BRINGS SUCCESS

The marching band didn't just march around at football games, parades, and competitions. They traveled to Ohio and Indianapolis. They competed with many different kinds of bands from all over the country. They saw the many different styles of the bands and learned some new things along the way.

Before the marching band could come to perfection they had to attend a week long camp during the summer. They attended two camps this year, both of which went from eight in the morning to nine in the evening. At the beginning of the first camp, they had a rough time starting off and getting used to each other, but towards the end of the second camp they were all in sync.

This year, the band's show was called Easter Symphony. It was a well-designed show that was beautiful and breathtaking. The band did a slower, more soothing performance this year. This year the band did many different formations to make the performance more dynamic. Band members practiced everyday after school and it paid off. This year the band made it to the finals at BOA Regionals and also advanced to the semi-finals at BOA Nationals.

The drum majors were Jessica Paloma (10), Nicole Cisz (12), and Ryan Soto (12), who conducted the band magically. They participated in many parades in Schererville, Dyer, and Whiting.

"It was such an honor to be asked to be a drum major. I'm only a sophomore, and I was just so thrilled and that they had confidence in me to be able to do it," said Jessica Paloma (10).

Allie Miserly (11) said, "The Homecoming was a blast. I'm so glad that I decided to go." The members were able to invite friends who were not in band. This year's Queen and King were Lindsay Lotshaw (12) and Chris Plewniak (12). Both were excited that they had won.

AND THE BEAT GOES ON

LC BANDS KEEP THE BEAT

Lake Central is home to three of the top bands in Indiana. Wind Ensemble, Symphonic Band, and Concert Band are three bands that are well known throughout the state.

During the football season, Concert Band and Wind Ensemble members combine to form the Marching Band. Symphonic Band is comprised of students who want to continue playing instruments, but do not want to participate in Marching Band.

To become as accomplished as they are, the bands practice often. Wind Ensemble and Concert Band have classes every blue day, and Symphonic Band meets on white days. When a concert is near, all three bands spend many hours after school in the auditorium practicing.

This year Wind Ensemble and Concert Band performed at Kahler and at the ISSMA contest in April.

"I hope that all the hours of practicing really pay off at the ISSMA contest this year. I want to perform well," said Julie Mannion (11), a member of Wind Ensemble.

Symphonic Band performed at a winter concert, and will perform again at an April concert and at the ISSMA contest. To participate in Symphonic Band, a student does not have to participate in Marching Band.

According to Steve Zajac (9), "The best part of Symphonic Band is that there is less stress than Marching Band, and it allows you to do other activities."

Wind Ensemble is recognized throughout the state as one of the best ensembles of its kind. To be involved in Wind Ensemble, students have to be in Marching Band. As a result, this band is composed of passionate and experienced musicians. Many students choose to involve themselves with this excellent program because they want to expand their musical abilities.

"With our band program, we teach about music and life," said Mr. Chris Harmon, the band director.

The Symphonic Band and the Concert Band have truly earned the respect of fellow bands across the state for their musical abilities.

JAZZIN'UP THE RHYTHM

SPECIALTY BANDS MOVE ON UP

Jazz and Percussion Ensembles have had a great year. Their members worked hard and competed well. But these two bands did more than merely compete; they also displayed their skills in multiple performances. Fans should be proud to know that these ensembles have represented the school well.

Percussion Ensemble performed at many competitions. The winter Percussion Ensemble placed second in the challenging IPA Open Concert Class. After earning high marks in competitions for the past eight years while having to share their drum equipment, the team got new drum batteries. Also the ensemble gained a new director, Mr. Jason Dyhouse. His experience helped to carry the team "to a new level," according to an ensemble member

Mr. Dyhouse and Mr. Chris Harmon also led the two Jazz Ensembles to great success. These bands were able to contribute to many great performances. Their continuing success has promised future members a high bar of excellence and a proud heritage to look back on.

Most members of the Jazz Ensembles found their involvement in the bands to be meaningful. The words of Ensemble I member Amy Koester (10) said the way most of LC's jazz musicians feel:

"Jazz is life- you just live it."

SOMETHING'S AFOOT

MUSICAL BRINGS SUSPENSE TO STAGE

This year's spring musical Something's Afoot ran from the middle of March to the beginning of April. It was a spin-off of the Agatha Christie novel Ten Little Indians. In the musical, several guests are invited to a house and murdered one by one. Accusations are made as everyone in the house hastily blames one another for the murders. As the mystery unfolds and fewer and fewer cast members are left, the guests eventually figure out that the owner of the house, who has never actually appeared on stage, is responsible for the killings. While the two guests who have not yet died celebrate over a glass of wine, the owner enlightens his visitors that they are celebrating the occasion of their own deaths because he has poisoned their wine with arsenic.

Though the performances in Something's Afoot seemed effortless, the actors and crew devoted great amounts of time in order to make the musical a success. The cast stayed after school every day for hours in order to perfect their performances. Although they spent extra hours at school, the cast members enjoyed their time as they memorized their lines and learned their choreography.

Even the audience could tell how much fun the cast had as they performed. The members were well prepared and familiar with the material. They kept the story line interesting and fun to watch.

"I went to the play opening night. I thought they did a really good job. All the actors were really enthusiastic and dramatic. The whole musical thing was really cool," said Ben Labas (11).

The majority of the cast was made up of seniors. Mrs. Angela Lowe, the director, specifically selected this musical because of its small cast; she wanted the seniors' last play at LC to be special. Lowe thought that the seniors deserved a performance that could be their own because of all the time and effort they had put into the school's theatre groups for four years. The seniors appreciated Mrs. Lowe's thoughtfulness in choosing it especially for them. Because of the size of the group, cast members had more responsibility, but it all paid off in the end with memories and a fantastic theatrical production.

"After seeing what theatre is while doing my second play, I wish I would have done this all through high school," said Chris Freiberg (12).

FINAL CURTAIN CALLS

CASTS & CREWS TAKE A BOW

This spring there were three play productions that were displayed to the public: Father of the Bride, God's Favorite, and Don't Drink the Water.

Father of the Bride is a takeoff on the hilarious movie Father of the Bride. It the story of a girl who falls in love and plans her wedding while her parents, especially her father, wreck havoc upon the poor young woman and her fiancé. The lead roles were played by Mark McLain as the father, Rachel Sharp as the daughter, Shannon Williams as the mother, and Everett Smith as the fiancé.

God's Favorite is a play about a businessman who is not sure of his faith in God. He refuses to renounce that he believes in an almighty creator and soon finds himself in the middle of a series of misadventures. At the end of the play, his faith in God is reinforced.

For the three plays, these students stayed after school, weeks after weeks perfecting their shows for the big production. Opening night was a great success for the Theater Guild. Hours of memorization, set building, and rehearsal came together and resulted in three solid theatre pieces.

"Even though we only had just the three performances, we still worked really hard and it paid off in the end. The set was really good and the actors put on a great show," said Kristen Cameron (10).

Both Father of the Bride and God's Favorite left the audience laughing in their seats, and each play featured memorable comedic dialogue.

Freshmen who may have been pushed to the periphery of the larger plays were presented with the opportunity to take center stage in their own show. Unlike previous years that included one act plays, the freshman plays this year were both full-length. Both of the freshman plays this year were comedies and had audiences roaring with laughter. The freshmen who participated in these shows enjoyed the opportunity to showcase their talents and learn more about the theatre craft.

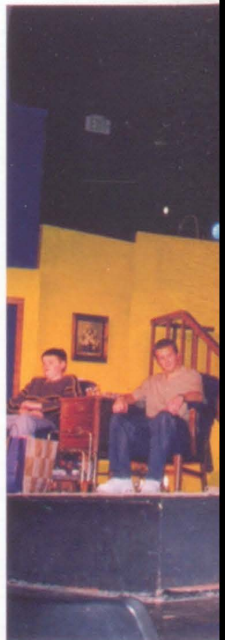

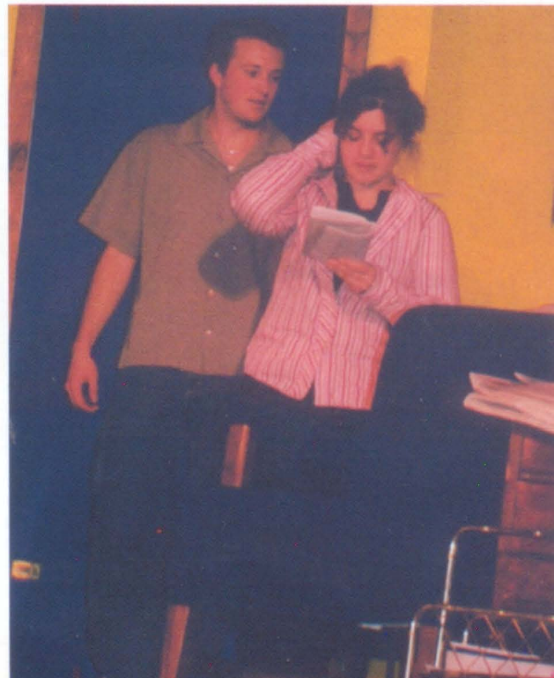

The plays featured at LC this year provided audiences and actors alike with funny lines and great times.

CLUBS IN ACTION

CLUBS GET UP AND GO

LC features a club for every interest and opportunities for every student to make a difference in his or her community. These clubs aren't for couch potatoes.

For each Thanksgiving, Interact begins the process of collecting canned goods, clothing, and toiletries for less fortunate families. Student Council sponsors the Toy Drive to provide Christmas presents for less fortunate children whose parents cannot afford to buy them.

"My favorite part was when everyone came together in LC, and seeing the looks on people's faces when we fed them, and helped the little kids find toys and clothes," said Erica Piffier (11), a Student Council member.

The Fine Arts Department performs concerts all year that entertain families and friends. The Choral Christmas Concert is looked forward to alumni and families while band family members enjoy the outdoor marching season.

Class Cabinets play a major role in planning social events for students. As early as freshman year, cabinet members begin fund-raising in order to sponsor the Junior/Senior Prom. Junior Class Cabinet decided to sell senior singles tickets for the first time this year.

"Anywhere from two-thirds to three-fourths of senior class said that they would like the option to buy single tickets even though most said they would try to find a date first," said club sponsor Mrs. Joan Loden.

Once Prom is over, leftover funds are turned over to Senior Class Cabinet to help plan Senior Banquet.

National Junior Honor Society sponsored Jump Rope for Heart, which raises money for the National Heart Association, for the first time this year. Teams made of students and staff worked together in order to receive money from their sponsors.

Getting Heard Above the Crowd

Get started! I need this by the end of the day! Deadlines are due by the end of the day! Computer 17 is down! Make use of what we have! These pictures are no good! Publications are more complicated than you would think. They're all about making deadlines and working together.

Group work is very important. If the entire class does not work together, there will be a lot of problems getting things done in an orderly fashion. Quiver is the yearbook class. Throughout the year, students work towards deadlines to get pages completed.

"It's a lot of hard work, but it is worth it because the yearbook is going to be great this year," said Megan McGovern (11). This year there is a new advisor, Miss Sarah Drolen, and it is her first year teaching.

Scout is the school newspaper. Students try hard to ensure that their stories are interesting and accurate. These journalists are often quite rushed because Scout is issued tri-weekly. This year Miss Carrie Wadycki is in charge of the class. "Since it is my first year, it is stressful, but the students are doing great. Every day things are improving," she said.

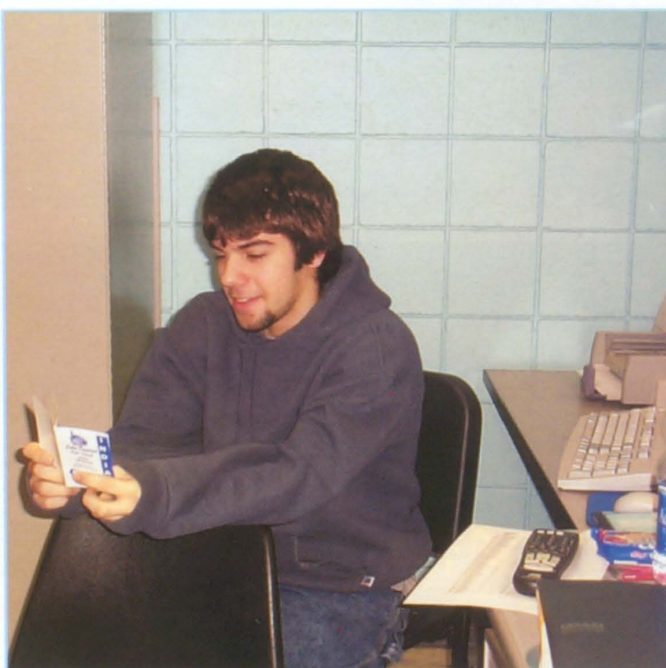

Video production and CD-ROM yearbook are also a big part of the publications at our school. Every day during SRT, video production puts together our daily announcements. They also produce the show Indian Insights.

"It takes a lot of effort, but it is totally worth it. It is also very fun," said Amy Wierzbicki (12).

Making the Grade

Academics Help Student Stand Out

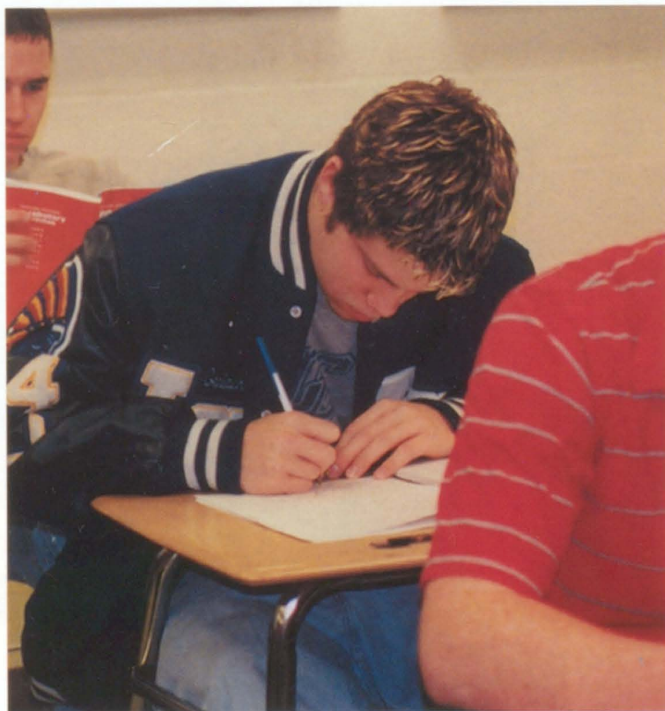

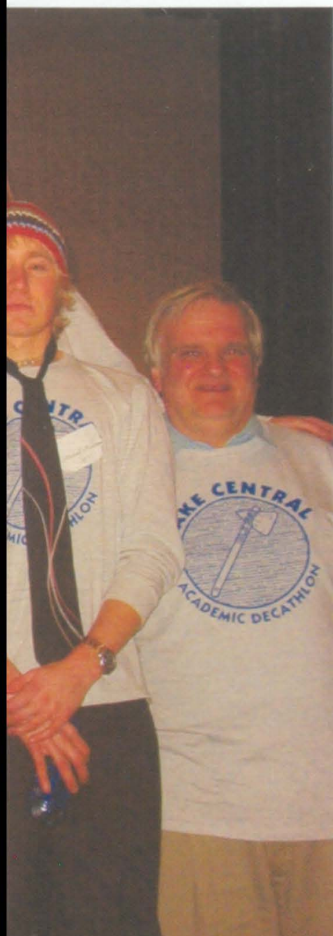

If a 3.9 GPA sounds like an easy achievement, just ask the members of the Academic Letterwinner club. In order to be eligible for this club, students must achieve a 3.9 GPA every semester. Each member receives an academic letter for his or her jackets. There is a recognition banquet in April, and at the end of the year, scholarships are handed out to the overachievers. Treasurer Lauren Kaptur (12) said, "Being treasurer for this club gave me real life experience with handling responsibility."

Academic Superbowl is an academic team that competes in March. The state finals are held in April. There are six coaches that practice with their teams.

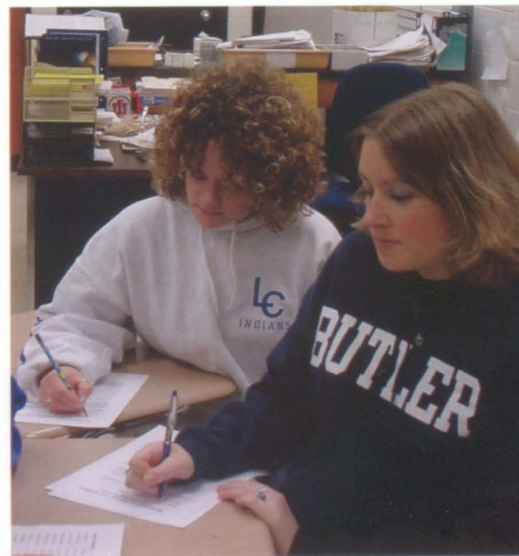

Dollars for Scholars is a club that raises money to give to seniors for college. They raise money by going to businesses and asking for donations. The teacher payroll deduction plan is a huge way of fund raising. If the teachers participate, 50 cents a week is taken out of their checks and added to their funds. By the end of the year, a large sum of money has been raised for chosen seniors.

Academic Decathlon involves ten students. Three students must have a 3.75 GPA or above, another three must have a 3.0-3.75 GPA, and the last three must have a 3.0 GPA or lower. These students meet every Wednesday with Miss King to practice all basic areas of education. This whole time is spent preparing for one competition in the spring.

Athletics superior in students' lives

Athletics have always been a staple in many students' lives. Athletic Letterwinners is a club that an athlete can join if he or she letters in a varsity sport. The members of the club gave back to the younger children of the corporation by helping conduct Fit Kids testing at the elementary schools. The students enjoyed having fun with the kids while recording their times and playing games with them at the end. Athletic Letterwinners also helped serve fans at LC sporting events by working the concessions stand at home games.

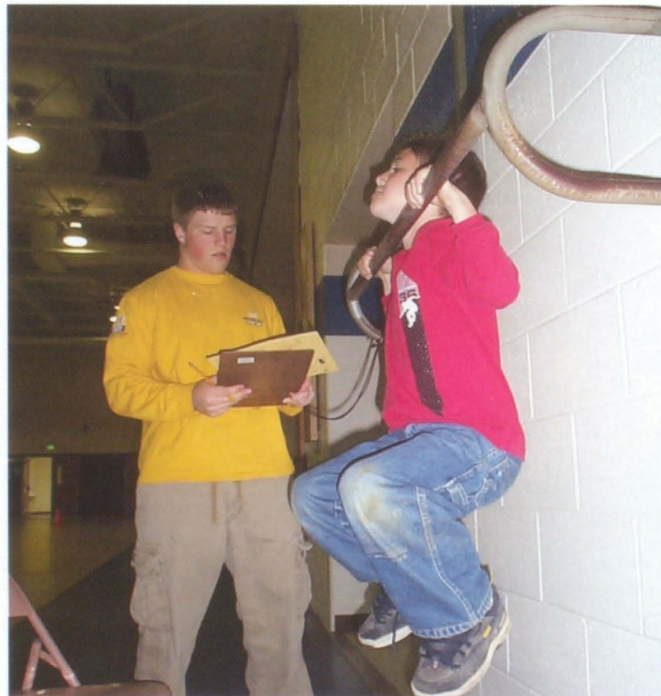

The Superfans who supported our Indians were just as important as the players on the team. This spirited group went to every game possible, home and away, in hopes of cheering on a victorious team. Superfan club members tailgated before football games, dressed up in wacky costumes, and cheered their hearts out at every game.

Their support had an obvious effect. The sports teams perform better at home games where the fan base is larger. Anyone playing on the field or the court can play with more confidence knowing the Superfans are behind them. They rally the spirits of our teams, and sometimes even frustrate the other team long enough for the mighty Indians to take home the victory. Spread by Jeff Hayes and Joanna Vlahos

Helping Others Succeed

Students Assisting Students

Michelle Capriglione (11), Beverly Nagel (11), Sarah Sitarski (11), and Jennifer Riesterer (11) toss out candy at the Homecoming parade.

The academic clubs at Lake Central always help out in some way, whether it be helping the school, assisting people who are unfortunate, or giving students the chance to shine. For example, the Spanish Honors Club takes responsibility for giving to unfortunate countries. During the year they make and decorate piñatas to send to other nations. They also collect eyeglasses and sunglasses to send to needy adults and children in Honduras.

Another popular foreign language at the school is German, and of course they have their own club. Club members have several fundraisers over the course of the year in order to raise money to use for their end of year trip to Germany. In the beginning of the year, a considerable amount of the German Club officers' time is spent on making their Homecoming float.

The president of German Club, Beverly Nagel, (11), said, "Working together and organizing the float with everyone that participated was a long lasting and memorable high school experience."

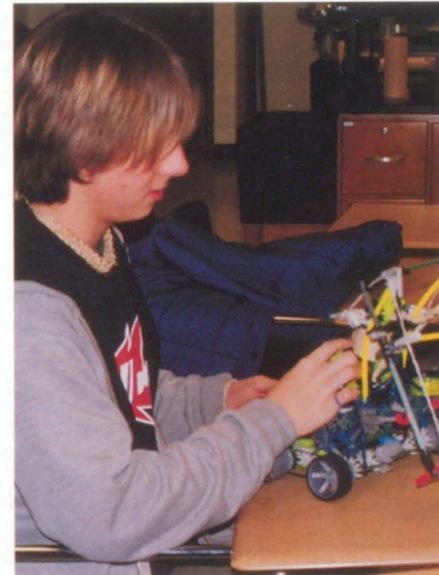

Science Olympiad gives those students who have a love for science the opportunity to participate in many scientific competitions against other schools. Physics labs, fossil findings, and Reach for the Stars are among the few competitions.

JETS compete in one academic competition in March at Purdue Calumet. Competitors are asked to solve problems involving calculus, geometry, chemistry, physics, and biology. Although JETS have only one competition, they meet on several different occasions to practice for that one important event.

Peer mentoring is also a way to show support for the school and help someone out at the same time. Students participate in peer mentoring because they enjoy using their own talents to help others succeed. Spread by Ali Wright and Carly Donlin

Students Join Together to Help Others

LC students are nothing if not involved. The school had four clubs dedicated to community service: Student Council, N-Teens, National Honor Society, and Interact. These clubs made it their missions to help others.

Student Council sponsored several major events throughout the year. There was Homecoming in September, the Toy Drive in December, a basketball tournament in February, and the Talent Show in April.

"I love Student Council," said member Jessie Largent (11). "You get to meet new friends and bring the school together with activities like Homecoming and Talent Show."

The Council had the strange situation of having two presidents, Jen Hektoen (12) and Hani Bharmal (12). Student Council members also participated in several service projects throughout the year.

Along with going to a soup kitchen once a month, N-Teens ran the Winter Formal. The two formal coordinators were Amy Wierzbicki (12) and Nicole Chelbana (12). The N-Teens' President was Sheri Demy (12). Club members benefitted from their community service.

"It's a good way to broaden horizons of life," said Wierzbicki.

National Honor Society, or NHS, consisted entirely of doing service projects. To get in, members had to have a 3.33 GPA, no discipline problems, and recommendations from teachers. NHS did many projects throughout the year, including a Candy Cane Gram, sponsoring a child for the Toy Drive, and Jump Rope for Heart.

Vaughn Ganiyu (12) explained that he joined NHS because of "the thrill that I get because people are there to help other people; they're not there for themselves."

And last but not least, there is Interact. Interact has no officers, only dedicated members. Interact's two major events were the Thanksgiving Food Drive and the Relay for Life in June. Interact's Food Drive goal of 100,000 cans was shattered, with the school pulling in 111,890 cans.

"It gives you that warm feeling inside," said Mike Bohn (11).

For the first time, Interact handed out letters for lettermen's jackets. The letters were given to members with 60 hours of participation and to members that have been involved in the club in previous years.

Taking an Interest

Students Explore a Variety of Clubs

Diversity Club, Art Club, Debate, Bowling, and Chess Club are just a few of the groups that students like to participate in because these interests are their hobbies. They dedicate their time both after school and during SRT to work on speeches, projects, and different strategies.

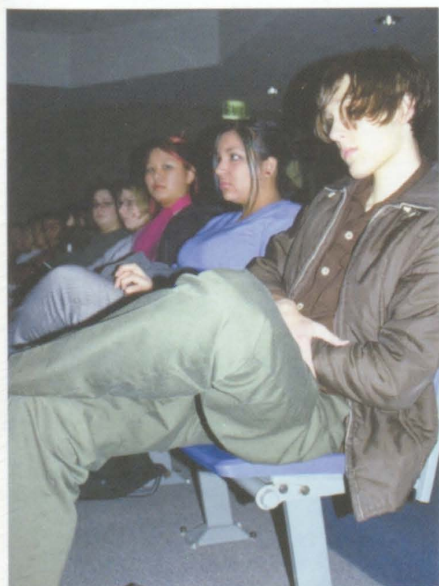

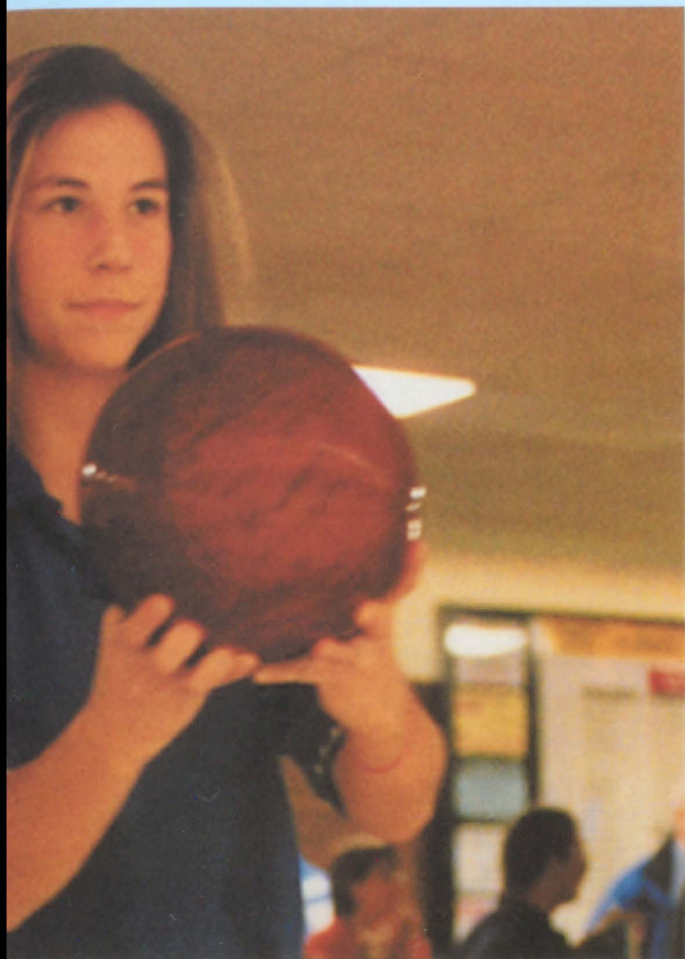

Diversity Club is a collection of students who like to help others by living up to their motto "Everyone should fit in." A member of the club, Michelle Hennessee (12) said, "We know that we aren't all perfect, but we try to change the way that people think." Members usually meet in the LGI room during SRT to talk about ways to deal with peer pressure.

Art Club allows students to express their creative side. These students help decorate the school by painting different murals and paintings on the walls. The Art Club takes various trips to Chicago to visit art exhibits.

Chess Club is for students who enjoy playing chess socially or competitively. This club meets during SRT on Fridays twice a month and is sponsored by Mr. Darryl Wierzal. Throughout the year, they compete in four individual tournaments and one team tournament.

Bowling Club, sponsored by Mr. Shawn Washington, is for students who have a passion for bowling. After a successful season, the bowlers captured first place at the state tournament. Their practices are held after school on Tuesdays and Thursdays, at Stardust Bowling Alley in Dyer. They participate in three tournaments a year, and also bowl smaller matches every week. The team spent much time perfecting their technique to be one of the top teams in the state.

Close quarters help bring students closer together – literally. While the student population keeps growing, the school building does not. Halls are transformed into human sardine cans during passing periods, and the floor becomes a makeshift desk for those seeking help in popular SRT destinations. Things are getting a little cozier for the 2,617 students contained within the walls of our steadily overcrowding high school.

Students are not the only ones who are impacted by massive class sizes. The janitorial staff must rid the halls of the scuffmarks of over 5,234 shoes. Cafeteria workers brace themselves every half hour as over 500 hungry teenagers race down the halls on a collision course towards the lunch lines. Teachers endure headaches as they attempt to match hundreds of names to the faces that fill the desks before them.

Densely packed classrooms may be intimidating to some, but most students take advantage of the opportunity to befriend the people they have been smooshed next to. Though tensions may mount as rooms become more congested, small spaces and big crowds are a large part of the Lake Central experience. We are all learning; we are all cramped; we are all part of one crowded classroom.

CLASS OF 2006

Freshmen fight through their first crowds

As three communities crowded together for our first year of high school, we thought of all the things we accomplished or tried to accomplish.

The new responsibilities that came into our life challenged us to take a step further for tackling something new. The opportunities for our future crowded our lives in every way possible.

As we walked into a new school, a myriad of thoughts ran through our minds.

Things were new and different. It was time for us to move up in life and really do what mattered most. We decided to do what was more important in planning for our future. What obstacles we had to overcome to get further in life and get what was important for us to succeed.

We were able to see old friends and meet new friends. New doors were opened. We were able to be a part of something to help plan for the future.

"Freshman Class Cabinet had expectations to raise enough money for their senior prom," said president Jacob Geary and vice president Amanda Warren.

We wanted to help make an impact on peoples lives that were less fortunate than we were.

"Students were also more involved in doing things for their community and things to help people who were in need," said sponsor Ms. Robin May.

As we started to finally adjust we realized that things weren't as bad as what we had expected. We weren't going to be thrown into our lockers; it was easy to adjust to the big new atmosphere.

Things started to come together. The time was coming when we wouldn't have to be called "Little Freshman" anymore and things were finally wrapping up.

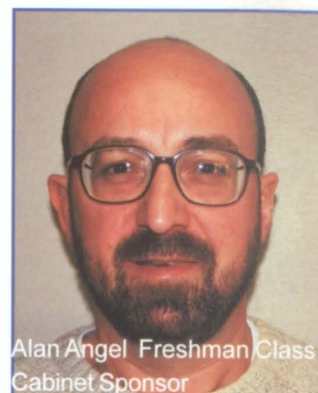

We would be moving up into a new year of more opportunities and getting closer to moving out into the real world of new beginnings.

So as the year came to an end we were thankful for what we had accomplished and hoped more for the future.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Sports and academics are always recognized, but there are so many more amazing things that people do. Clare Ford (9) is a senior in Girl Scouts. She has been a Girl Scout for nine years. She filled out an application explaining her community service and leadership skills in order to go to the Girl Scout National Convention, a program is for 14 to 17 year olds. It was held in Long Beach, CA, in the summer.

"I was one of the two girls from the Calumet area sent as a delegate to both the Older Girl Congress and the National Council Session," said Ford. The Older Girl Congress is a forum for girls to discuss solutions to various issues facing girls today. The National Council Session is a four-day forum for delegates from all over the country and overseas to vote on new policies and new programs to further the Girl Scout movement.

Some of the decisions she had to make with the National Council included a raise in annual dues, a new program for young women of ages 18 to 25 and a new title for United States' Girl Scouts.

"We were also shown the results of some of the programs started at the last National Convention," said Ford. "I recommend this program to all Girl Scouts and also non-Girl Scouts."

The teen and preteen program has been revolutionized, making it more appealing to current Girl Scouts and non-Girl Scouts alike. "My favorite memory from this was when they threw us a party after the first night because we were creating a new program for older Girl Scouts," said Ford.

This was a big honor for Ford and a great learning experience. "Everything is geared towards remembering our past while living for our future," she said.

THE LIFE OF DUFFY LAWES

At age 2, Lawes started his mother's car and put it into reverse while she talked with a neighbor. Mrs. Lynn Lawes had to run and jump into the car to stop it.

One day when Lawes was 3, Mrs. Lawes got a phone call from their neighbor telling her that Lawes was peeing on a street sign.

Lawes had a love for older women at a very young age. When he was 4, he flirted with them endlessly. While eating at McDonalds with his mother one day, he saw a pretty 17 year old girl. Lawes asked his mom to write down his phone number on a piece of paper. Lawes went over to the girl, gave her his number, and told her to call him.

When Lawes was 6, his neighbor called his mother and told her that she had seen her son on the roof of Protsman Elementary School. He said that some older kids had dared him to go up there, and Lawes thought that it wasn't a big deal.

Born
Dec. 18, 1987

When Lawes was 3, Mrs. Lawes bought him many expensive pairs of shoes that would mysteriously disappear. She found out later that he threw them down the sewer to the Ninja Turtles because he thought they needed shoes.

Lawes' sisters, Hannah and Caitlin, did something pretty funny to him. One day Mrs. Lawes came home and was called downstairs by her daughters. She went down the stairs, heard thumping, and found Lawes in the dryer turning around laughing hysterically.

When Lawes was 5, Jillian Ryan and he found stacks of old newspapers in his garage, and they decided to deliver the cruddy papers for many blocks. That night, a storm came and blew the papers all over. It took hours for them to pick up all the papers.

At the age of 7, Lawes would go over to his best friend, Jillian Ryan's, house and watch her. Jillian was in a drowning accident that left her brain damaged, so Lawes would go over and keep her company. He would make her laugh, read to her, and just be a good friend.

Lawes has always wanted weird and unusual Christmas presents. One year, at about 9 years old, Lawes wanted a cash register. A real one, not a fake. Plus, he wanted a cappuccino maker and other really expensive things.

After you read this time line, ask Mr. Duffy Lawes to show you his booty dance.

When Lawes was 12, his whole family went to see his sister, Caitlin, in St. Joseph, Missouri, for a weightlifting competition. Lawes didn't want to ride in a car, so he decided to buy a ticket for himself so he could take a plane. He took the South Shore to downtown Chicago, rode another train to O'Hare airport, and finally got on a plane. Instead of being dropped off in St. Joseph, he was dropped off in Kansas City, MO. The hotel that he was staying at refused to pick him up 50 miles away. So he took a cab to a gas station and the shuttle picked him up there. Lawes got to the hotel five hours before the rest of the family. He checked in, ordered room service and movies, and had a massage.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Chris "Duffy" Lawes was an outrageous kid when he was younger, and some things never really change. He played some pretty funny pranks on his mother. Though he had many harmless jokes, one sticks out the most. When Lawes was six years old he really made his mom pay. Mrs. Lynn Lawes told him one day that he was going to be going to the gas station pretty soon. Lawes didn't like the idea of going anywhere, so he decided to solve the problem himself. He went outside got the hose, turned on the water, and filled the gas tank up with water.

While Lawes was filling the tank up with the water, his mom came out and yelled, "What are you doing?" Lawes said, "I got yelled at for a while by my mom, but my dad really didn't yell at me, and I didn't get grounded." Though it was just a harmless practical joke, Mrs. Lawes' bill for the car repair was over $400. Lawes is still the fun joker that he always was.

CLASS OF 2005

Sophomores become part of the crowd

The sophomores became one of the three classes sharing the high school. We encountered many new faces and challenges, but learned to slowly edge our way into the crowd.

Finding time to take drivers' ed between school and extracurricular activities was a major hassle for many students. "I was going to take drivers' ed over the summer, but I decided to go to football camp instead. Now, I can't get my license until January," said Eric Mikolajczak (10).

Every student had his or her own reasons for going to driver's ed and for getting their license. "I want it so that if my mom's not home, I can go places and get things by myself," said Saul Arellano (10).

Class cabinet had new sponsors this year- Ms. Leslie Lettiere and Mr. Bret Lettiere. Class Cabinet raises money to help pay for prom. "We sold Krispy Kremes, doughnut discount cards, and had a car wash," said Ms. Lettiere.

Sophomore year is also the year when students take a week out of their schedules to take the ISTEPs, which also double as the G.Q.E. (graduation qualifying exam). It's a week of mixed up schedules and long hours of frustration.

Some students didn't mind these unique circumstances. "I liked the change in schedule," said Kristen Castor (10). "The tests weren't that bad."

Somehow we managed to fit all of our activities into our busy schedules.

Kaitlyn Hayhurst (10) said, "I missed having all of my classes by my locker and my friends close by, but I loved being able to see all the new faces of the high school and becoming part of the crowd."

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Many at the school claim to be exceedingly busy, but few can match the hectic schedule of Jeremy Lawson. Whether snapping shots for Scout or doing community service, Jeremy always keeps himself busy.

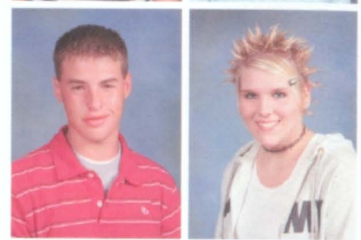

During the school day, Jeremy tackles the tasks of a normal LC student, but he also takes on extras like theatre, Scout, and photo club. His many duties range from finding the perfect shot as a Scout staff photographer, to planning a great trip as the vice president of the photo club, to managing the stage crew of Frankenstein.

That is not to say that Jeremy has no life outside of school. In his free time, Jeremy likes to backpack, kayak, and rock climb. Even with all of those activities, Jeremy still manages to find the time to help in his community. When one sees the person behind the camera they realize there is more to Jeremy than meets the eye.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Bright lights, music blaring, crowds cheering- these are just a few things that bands anticipate at their concerts. Many teens dream of playing their favorite instrument or singing in their very own band, but only a few actually get to fulfill their dream. Here at Lake Central, Kevin Sasaki (10) and friends, Matt Vanvlymen (10), Kevin Mardirosain (9), and Kyle Rastovsky (9), have their own band, Theef.

"Our band plays punk music like Blink 182," said Sasaki. They have had the opportunity to play at places like Club X, Oasis 160, and Dyer Fest. When asked about their band, Sasaki described them as wild and crazy. He said, "There is not much to do in the Tri-Town area, so we go out and act immature and try to find fun things to do." He started playing in the band because he looked up to other bands and thought it looked fun. He adds that his father taught him how to play the guitar and he has been playing for four years now. Sasaki also sings in the band. Mardirosain plays the drums, Rastovsky plays the bass, and Vanvlymen plays the lead guitar.

Crowded Schedules Help Prepare For Senior Year

Notorious for being the most difficult year of the high school career, junior year brings many obstacles. Taking the PSATs in the fall to prepare for the SATs brought much stress to students. "I took the PSATs just to see what the SATs were like," said Alex Szewciw.

"Classes are getting harder, you have to do more work. I think teachers expect more from us because they are preparing us for college," said Phil Pawlowski. The college search also begins for most on-track junior students.

Since junior year is one of the most significant years for college admission, many students are striving to do their best academically, as well as participating in extra curricular activities. "Colleges look at junior year the most because they believe juniors are serious about their future," explained guidance counselor, Mrs. Sandy Wright. But, it's hardly all work and no play for the junior class.

After two years students are finally allowed to attend Prom. "I am excited for Prom because I like getting dressed up," said Stephanie Buck.

The junior Class Cabinet was also hard at work preparing for Prom in May. In November, the junior Class Cabinet was hard at work and optimistic about the school year. "We're still in the planning stages, but we have some really great ideas floating around," said junior Class president, Jacquelyn Moredich.

Driving to school was also a major gain for the junior class. After the band season, the Freshmen Center parking lot reopened, allowing the juniors the opportunity to drive to school.

Junior year proved to be a stressful, yet eventful year. Many opportunities came about for juniors to participate in and become more involved in our school. With Prom, driving to school, and preparing for college, juniors had many tasks to complete before it was time to be a senior.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Hardworking, determined, dependable, nice, sweet, thoughtful, talented and down-to-earth: these are just a few words that come to mind when describing Shannon Williams. Shannon's week fills up quickly with choir, Counterpoints, clubs, theatre, competitions, and just trying to find time with the people she loves and appreciates most.

Shannon has been acting and singing ever since she was very young, when she would perform and recreate Disney movies. Shannon got into singing at a very young age when her father taught her how. Her mother introduced her to acting at the age of four, by putting her into fairy tale plays. From that day on, she has never stopped. She loves doing both theatre and singing, but "I think singing is my first passion," she said. She goes on to say that she feels better every time she expresses her character through singing.

Not only does Shannon's week fill up with activities, it also fills up with stress. Shannon had to play two different characters in All Because of Agatha. She played the two characters Joan and Cookie, having to switch weekends. Shannon has been in seven plays since her freshman year, playing all sorts of different characters. Joan and Cookie have been her most difficult roles to date, due to the amount of memorization and switching required.

Shannon plans on continuing to sing and act next year. "The other people that I am in theatre and choir with really inspire me." She says the directors also play a big role. She goes on to say that all her castmates are very supportive and talented, and she is just happy to share the stage with them.

Shannon plans to attend Columbia University in Chicago to major in fashion merchandise marketing and minor in vocal performance.

"Shannon is a very nice and imaginative girl - she seems to get along with everyone and enjoy theatre very much," says Mrs. Pam Neth, director of Frankenstein.

Shannon would like to thank her dad for teaching her everything she knows about music and her mom for her support. She also thanks her directors for choir and theatre because they all helped her.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Ever wonder who the fastest skater in the state is? It's Brad Newell, a member of our varsity hockey team. He started playing roller hockey in fifth grade, then made it to ice hockey in seventh grade. When he came to LC, Newell played both junior varsity and varsity hockey, and now he is one of the best members of the hockey team. He won the sportsmanship award his freshman year and was named the fastest skater in the state last year.

Newell credits his success to Mrs. Laske, who he believes is his good luck charm. "I have many great fans that support me through out my games, like Bre Ventramiglia, the LC girls swim team, Laske's little sister, Coach Lamont's wife, and Officer Anderson," said Newell. Newell idolizes his best friend, Tommy Dutko, and his two older brothers, Pat and Eric. Before his career is over, he would like to win state and earn a spot on Team Indiana. "I will play hockey to my grave or until my body will not allow it anymore," he said.

CLASS OF 2003

Seniors make their way through the crowd!

We did it! The past four years have flown by, but they represent a time in our lives that we will always remember. Coming into freshman year was a little bit of a change for all of us, but our high school situation began to gradually get better as we all grew older.

As sophomore and junior year approached, we all became more acquainted with our fellow classmates. We moved out of the Freshman Center and really got a chance to experience the whole high school atmosphere. Not only did we make friends and have fun, but we also had to take things more seriously. As junior year came, we all started to think about future plans like college and jobs. Even though we were uneasy about making such important decisions, we had to look beyond and try to make the right path for ourselves.

As senior year approached, we knew that we had a great year to look forward to. Walking through those doors on the first day of school gave us the true feeling of knowing that this was our last year of high school. We ambitiously and anxiously awaited our chance to graduate and continue the next chapter of our lives in college. This was our last year to be together and make the memories that we would be carrying with us for the rest of our lives.

Graduating from high school is a bittersweet experience. Although we leave behind the lockers and the warning bells, the principals and the lunchrooms, our time spent here will never be forgotten. The lasting friendships will be cherished, and the lessons learned will shape us from the people we are today, and the people we will be in the future.

The time has now come to accept our diplomas and gradually face the real world. Hopefully LC has prepared us for what is yet to come. Good luck to each and every one of us.

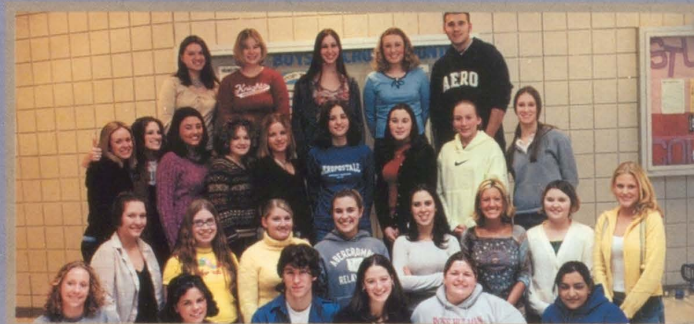

Class motto: Special times and special places, special friends together; the moments pass so quickly, but the memories last forever.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

"Only two people know what their class rank is," the cliché goes, "The person who is ranked number one, and the person who is ranked last."

Senior Kate Mitchell fell into that category, and she was certainly not the last student. Enrolled in all the honors classes she could possibly take, actively involving herself in school, and keeping a cool head through it all simply proved that this girl is deserving of her high rank.

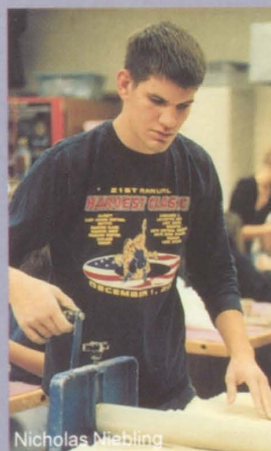

Mitchell earned her spot at the top of the senior class with a combination of natural intelligence and a good work ethic. While many of her fellow classmates succumbed to senioritis, she was able to maintain her rank by focusing on her studies. Mitchell continued to earn straight A's while making extra time for her extracurricular activities.

The class of 2003 valedictorian was involved in diving, National Honor Society, Interact club, Academic Letterwinners, Athletic Letterwinners, and the JETS team. She also competed in gymnastics for 10 years and tutored other students.

The support from her parents and diving coach Janel Tobias helped Mitchell to succeed throughout her years in high school. In addition to being a great student, she broke school and sectional records in diving.

Mitchell gained one final honor: acceptance to West Point, one of the most selective institutions in the nation. At the last minute, however, she realized that a future career in the military was not for her. Now, Mitchell will attend Purdue University to major in aeronautical engineering.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Many students find it difficult to balance their time with other important activities that they have going on in their lives. Amanda Brewer turns to horseback riding to help get her mind off of some of the rigors of everyday life. She has been horseback riding for the past 10 years of her life.

Amanda's love for animals was what first interested her in riding, and one day she decided to pursue it. Throughout the course of her life she has owned many different kinds of horses, but right now she has two. One of them is still a baby and hasn't been named yet, and the older horse is named SlewAttack.

Since LC does not offer a horseback riding team, Amanda meets her instructor for practice at a barn four miles from her house to keep up with her hobby. Maintaining a relationship with her horse is important to Amanda. She practices about four or five times a week, for at least an hour to ensure that she and her horse are the best team they can possibly be.

Horseback riding has definitely paid off for her future. Next year she will join the Ball State Equestrian Team where she will be a jumper. The team is made up of people with varied skill levels, and Amanda will enter into the advanced level.

A FACE IN THE CROWD

Rumors and stories have always made a special home at LC over the years. Perhaps it was for this reason that there was no big surprise when the whole school buzzed about Colin Hubbard. Students developed theories about why Hubbard never seemed to change his clothes.

The story, passed through countless mouths, naturally had become somewhat distorted during the process. In actuality, a man approached Hubbard at a thrift store one day and sold him the well-known red sweat suit. Hubbard agreed to wear the suit everyday for the small fee of $500.

If he did not live up to his end of the deal however, he would have to pay the small price of having a sex change operation. The bet began on the first day of school. Although ridiculed by many, Hubbard pulled through with his end of the agreement and continued to wear the suit every day. Perhaps wearing it proved the point that appearances do not always matter.

"I think it's funny people have to worry about what they wear. It's fabric!" Hubbard said.

Undoubtedly, wondering what to wear never presented itself as a problem. Wearing it to work also did not turn out to be a problem as Hubbard worked as a dishwasher.

Ultimately, the suit represents more than just a bet.

Students often dress according to what is in style, but according to Hubbard "... it's ridiculous that most people have to be Xerox copies."

Seniors come together for banquet and awards.

When people think of the most memorable dance, many think of Prom. Many seniors, though, would disagree.

Megan Smith said, "Prom will not even compare to senior banquet."

The music was extremely eclectic. The DJ played everything from Jean Paul's "Get Busy" to the Trammps' "Disco Inferno" to Coolio's "Gangsta's Paradise." Besides a great DJ and nostalgic music, there was a video camera and giant screen. Even if the almost-graduates were not in the middle of the dance floor, they were still able to see what was going on.

Some people decided to go all out and dress to the theme. Rachael Sharp wore a yellow and gold one-piece outfit that was straight out of the seventies. Other people wore wigs and powder blue polyester suits. The class created a combination of the seventies and today.

Due to the number of people in the senior class, some people met a few of their classmates for the first time at the banquet.

"It's weird seeing people that you do not know, but good because you can reunite with old friends that you have not talked to in years," said Nicole Chelbana.

"The night made me think of how much I will miss all of my friends," said Catherine Mazeikas.

Amy Simac said, "It was a nice wrap up of the last four years."

The most memorable moment of the night for many came when the senior Centralettes requested the song "Good Friend" in memory Diana Kakidas and Christina Chakonas. What began as a simple hug between a few people ended as a class-wide embrace. As seniors gathered together on the dance floor to remember their departed classmates, they were thankful for their friends and all their high school memories.

Teachers vs. Students

Kristin Buchler (10) and Louis Aguilera (11) take a break from studying together in SRT. The teenage couple is not too serious with their sometimes on-and-off relationship.

The Bushong family takes a time out for a quick picture. Mr. Eric and Mrs. Sandy Bushong have been happily married and have two children together. These two Lake Central teachers have a very strong marriage, and will stay together throughout the years.

Students tend to slip in While teachers stick to what they like

Coach Ron Fredrick's Schedule

3 a.m.-Wakes up and starts getting ready for work
4:30 a.m.-Starts one hour drive to school
7:15 a.m.-Begins teaching first hour class
2:30-4 p.m.-Coaches girls track after school
5:30 p.m.-Gets home from school
6:30 p.m.-Eats dinner
7: p.m.-Starts grading student's work
9:30 p.m.-Gets ready for bed and out of fads or trends, and what is much more practical.

Allison Couwenhoven's Schedule

- 6 a.m.-Wakes up and gets ready for school
- 7:15 a.m.-Starts her day at school
- 2:30-4 p.m.-Runs and works out after school
- 6 p.m.-Eats dinner with her family
- 6:45 p.m.-Starts her homework
- 8 p.m.-Relaxes after doing homework by talking on the phone, watching TV, or hanging out with friends
- 10:30 p.m.-Gets ready for bed

Hillarie Smigiel (12) shows off her trendy new outfit. For Smigiel style is more important than cost. High school girls tend to spend extravagantly on fashionable clothes for school.

Fashion thrifty teacher Miss Courtney King looks cute in her practically priced outfit, all of which was purchased for under $30. Expensive clothes are usually not a high priority for busy teachers.

Psychology and Sociology teacher Mr. Ralph Holden speeds away in his family vehicle, "The Silver Bullet." He was reluctant to buy the van, but realized that as a family man it was the most practical and safe thing to drive.

Andy Kosco (11) proudly poses for a picture by his chic Camaro. His passengers are sometimes cramped in the very small backseat.

Mr. Tom Megyesi has no problem buying his lunch with no wait at all. The teachers also tend to have a better selection of food in their comfortable and laid back cafeteria.

The students in the cafeteria form long lines, leaving only a few minutes to eat their lunch. Lengthy waits are not uncommon, especially on pasta bar days.

What do the administrators think about work?

Our administrators work hard to keep the large crowds at LC happy. Like the students they serve, they also have likes and dislikes about the school. Here, they offer some insights into their reasons for working at the school.

"I feel fortunate to have a job I enjoy coming to every day. It's rewarding to work with people and make a difference in their lives."

Freshman Principal
Mr. Ken Miller

"No day is ever the same. The things you plan to do the next day always get put off until the next day, but it really is a lot of fun."

Assistant Sophomore Principal
Mr. Sean Begley

"We have a great administrative team, and I really enjoy working with all of them. Especially Mr. Miller because he's a great guy to work with."

Assistant Freshman Principal
Mr. Bob Schlender

Dr. Janet Emerick- Superintendent
Dr. Rocky Killion- Assistant Superintendent
Tony Arini- Director of Instruction
Tom Dykiel- Director of Business Services

Margaret Clark- School Board Member
Dr. John DeVries- School Board President
Nancy Gray- School Board Member
Howard Marshall- School Board Vice President

Debra Phelps- School Board Secretary
Sandra Platt- High School Principal
Larry Veracco- Assistant Senior Principal
Robert McDermott- Assistant Junior Principal

Mrs. Bonnie Colon with Mrs. Kim Talaber sorts mail in the Freshman Center guidance office.

Mrs. Cindy Flagg answers a phone call while going through paperwork.

Principals Mrs. Sandie Platt and Mr. Ken Miller prepare to give their opinion about the past school year.

Dr. Janet Emerick outlines the game plan for the monthly board meeting.

Mrs. Cheryl Malsch carefully examines a teacher request form.

Teaching with just a little more class

Teachers take on a more creative approach in the classroom

Some teachers have a unique way of teaching their classes. Many feel that using different teaching methods gets their students to pay attention and focus on their lesson.

Mrs. Chris Schneider pulls out her glasses with a big nose attached every time her students start to drift off into their own little worlds. Though this action results in laughs and a little distraction, the glasses eventually get the students to pay attention to what she is saying. Students usually react better to teachers who make the class interesting as opposed to the teachers who rely on lectures and notes.

Another teacher who knows how to get his students' attention is Mr. Scott Hilyard. He uses lots of arm gestures and really gets into the stories that he tells to his students. Mr. Hilyard was telling a story to one of his World Geography classes and started rolling on the ground to get his point across. Many of the students are learning things without knowing it because they are staying awake and interested in class.

Mrs. Roberta Harnish found that the best way to get her students' attention is to stand on her head and teach the lesson. When her students start to drift off or have conversations among each other, she stands on her head and finds that all eyes and ears are immediately focussed on her.

The casual observer might find Mr. Tom Clark's Civil War discussion strange, but most of his students loved it. Mr. Clark took his class outside and showed them how to load and shoot a rifle used in the Civil War. Unique ways of teaching classes may come off as slightly odd, but in the end the teachers who employ these unorthodox methods are the ones who most effectively get across to their students.

What clique did they click with?

High school students have always divided themselves into groups that they hang out with, but could you picture Mr. Richard Lawson or Mr. Dave Wilson hanging out with the “cool dudes”?

Today, music can sometimes identify the group a person belongs to, but this was not the case when Mr. Lawson was a teenager.

“I think the music wasn’t an identifier of groups. The music was all mainstream and didn’t seclude me to one group,” said the freshman English teacher. “Later I realized it was better not to be part of a defined group because it was easier to go away to college and not get locked into my high school years like some people I know.”

“It also helped me to become an independent thinker and not rely on a group of people to make my decisions,” he continued.

Mr. Brian Patch, a social studies teacher, also did not notice much separation due to the group a person usually associates with.

“Where I went we had our farmers, jocks, metal-head burnouts, and other various groups, but there wasn’t any segregation down the halls,” said Patch.

Hundreds of miles away, Mr. Wilson formed the same conclusion.

“I was not really attached to one group and had friends in various groups. Some of my friendships were formed through going to concerts, but not so much the music. Others were formed at the football games,” said the English teacher, who differentiated himself from “the clique” by being himself.

Despite different locations and atmosphere, isolation due to taste of music or idol did not segregate people from any particular group.

Did you like the subject that you teach now when you were in high school?

"When I was in school my favorite subjects were history, sociology, geography, and World Civics. I have always been interested in history. I have been teaching at Lake Central for five years now. I teach one history class and the rest of my classes are World Geography. I would some day like to have a sociology class. It is interesting to me how societies work and vary from culture to culture," said Mr. Scott Hilyard

"Math was one of my favorite subjects in high school. My other favorite subject was English. When I was a senior in high school, I decided that I did not want to be an English teacher because I would not want to grade term papers or compositions. I felt that it would be difficult to be objective in grading them," said Mrs. Nancy Crooks

"I teach physical education. I liked Human Anatomy, which is a science class. It's related to PE and it's helpful, too. Human Anatomy helped because PE isn't just gym class anymore. I have to teach about the bones, muscles, and heart rate," said Mrs. Denise Fitzgerald

"I like English and love to read. I wanted to be the wonderful teacher that I am," said Mr. Wayne Sventanoff

Some memories never die

Faculty members relive Prom through another generation

Serving as an important and popular tradition for many years, Prom has put memories into generations of minds. Music, dancing, and a date have always been capable of adding up to a fun time.

Every year students eagerly wait for their Prom day to arrive in hopes that it will be remembered for years to come. They hope to have the time of their lives at Prom so they may leave it with many wonderful memories. Many faculty members have fond memories of their high school Prom experiences.

Although most of them were reluctant to do so, a few faculty members finally handed over the pictures from when they attended Prom.

Though students are unfamiliar with the tradition, many faculty members recall after-Prom parties where dinner was provided.

"We had a Prom and dinner at a hall at the same place so we didn't leave," said Mrs. Diane Handley.

Mrs. Pam Andersen also remembered having an after-Prom party. Another point that she brought up was the cost of it all. She mentioned how Prom did not have the same amount of expense as it does today.

"Our tickets were $40... that included the dinner," she said.

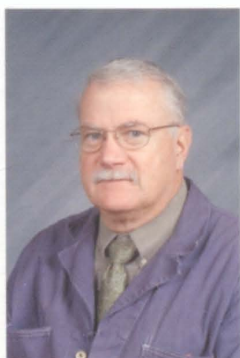

According to Mrs. Cheryl Malsch, tickets "...didn't cost as much money because the whole junior class paid for Prom."

For one night out of the year, girls had the chance to get all decked out in beautiful gowns. Guys didn't spend nearly as much time on their style, but they too had the chance to dress up.

Other faculty members have unique recollections.

"We were excited because we were the first class to have our Prom held outside of the gymnasium," said Mrs. Laurel Bankroff of her senior Prom. "We were very fortunate, especially since we held the responsibility for decorating the gym for Prom when it was held at the gym."

What do teachers have in their room?

When the word "classroom" comes to mind, most think of apples on the desks and periodic tables hanging on the walls. Some notable teachers are doing their part to shatter the stereotype of what a "normal" classroom can be.

What are cats in formaldehyde doing in Mr. Louis Valse's class?

Mrs. Pam Miller leads the fight against terrorism with her shovel.

They're cute and cuddly and on Mrs. Penny Tokoly's wall—pictures of students' pets!

Mr. Randy Fenters thinks his room is odd enough without any additions. "Just me. That's the only thing weird in here," he said.

Health was uncomfortable for some before, but Mr. Bob Komara makes things worse with a real human skeleton.

Mr. Tom Hansen is the proud owner of both a boar's head and a fish.

Why did you want to become a teacher?

"I felt that a good teacher is a life long learner and that teachers have the most dynamic job because they learn something new every day." - Mrs. Penny Tokoly

"I worked as a respiratory therapist and found it depressing. I would rather help people and see smiles rather than tears." - Mr. Tom Hansen

"I liked to read and discuss literature. I also like kids." - Mrs. Toni Radio

"In high school, I enjoyed helping other students and found that I had a knack for it." - Mr. Dave Harnish

"I thought I could do better than my teachers, and I didn't want students to have teachers like mine." - Mr. Randy Fenters

"I liked the schedule of teaching because I was off when my kids were. I also enjoyed history and was encouraged to teach by my high school government teacher." - Mrs. Judy Skafish

"I liked my Spanish teacher and I wanted to become like her." - Mrs. Chris Schneider

"I felt that I could relate well with teenagers." - Mr. Richard Lawson

Mr. Dave Harnish helps prepare his students for an upcoming test. His knowledge prevented pretest headaches.

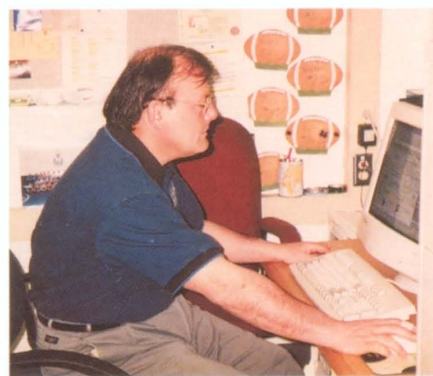

Mr. Mike Slys helps his students understand a lecture by demonstrating a chemical reaction in his chemistry classes.

Mrs. Chris Schneider keeps her Spanish classes interesting by dressing in disguise.

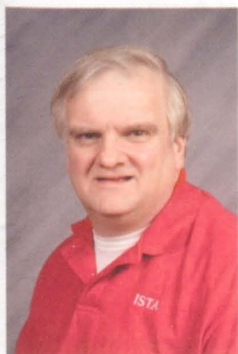

Mr. Rod Wartman diligently works on checking stocks for his students in his economics class.

Mr. Doug Burns checks the progress on Ryan Majka's (9) woodshop project. Woodshop makes different projects throughout the year like shelves and spice racks.

Mr. Mike Howe instructs Nathan Gumbiner (11) while he is working on the computer for his drafting project. Drafting is a class that takes much time and effort to perfect.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU DONT HAVE A RICH UNCLE

reinvent u.SM

If you participate in state DECA or BPA competitions or have at least a 2.7 GPA, you could earn a size-able scholarship from Davenport University. Lots of other assistance is available, too. In fact, 75% of all Davenport students receive financial aid. So you can come get the extra earning-power that a Davenport education offers—without going poor in the process.

For more information

Lake Central Youth Basketball

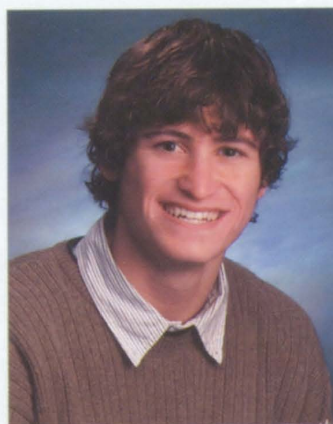

Proudly Honors the Winners of the 2002-2003 Michael Furman Mental Attitude Award and Bill McCormick Memorial Award

The Michael Furman Mental Attitude Award for boys and the Bill McCormick Memorial Award for girls are awarded each year to the student in Lake Central Youth Basketball High School Divisions who best exemplify the highest standard of mental attitude to peers, team, and the league.

The award is not for the highest scorer, but rather the person who is willing to sacrifice their own personal statistics so others may excel. This person epitomizes unselfish play and never quits. They are the team member who will find a way to elevate their team above the rest in moral and ethics. This person is complementary to all, while at the same time keeping the spirit of competition and exuding the joy of the sport.

The boys award honors Michael Furman, a life long LCYB player who tragically died in a car accident. The girls award honors Bill McCormick who devoted many years of service as the league's president and was a strong advocate of the girls league.

Lake Central Youth Basketball offers instructional basketball leagues for grades 2-12 in Schererville, St. John, and Dyer.

Colophon

Adviser: Miss Sarah Drolen
Editor-in-Chief: Katie Farrer
Design Editor: Lauren Kaptur
Copy Editor: Anne Klingeberger

What a crowded year it's been! It seems like just yesterday that we were sitting at yearbook camp, listening to Nutty Nancy yell at us about trapped captions, white space, and column guides. We left camp with a completely different perspective and brand new ideas for this year. Thanks, Nancy!

We came back from camp with not only a new theme, but a new adviser. Miss Sarah Drolen has expertly navigated us through a sea of captions, photo tabs, and grease pencils. Without her guidance, our first year as editors and her first year as a teacher would have been a wreck. She has been both an adviser and a friend. We knew that we could come to her with our problems on and off the column guides. S-103 became our second home, and Miss Drolen our surrogate mother (or at least big sister).

Our senior year as editors has been a learning experience, to say the least. We've overcome many obstacles and have grown from each of them. From having to fire our first staff member to staying after school to check spreads as the war in Iraq started, we've definitely had our downs. But we've also had our ups: the big Christmas Extravaganza, our first Journalism Banquet, and a field trip to Franklin College for a great convention.

We couldn't have put this fabulous book together without the help of an equally fabulous staff. Thanks to Laura for all the great photos, Denise for being our Fine Arts guru, Suzanne for keeping the senior section under control (and scoring us John Mayer tickets), Ashley and Katie for doing all our dirty work, and Sam for knowing how to count money. And for those we didn't mention, you know we appreciate you.

Good luck to the editors of the future: Ashley, Kelli, Jen, and the three Katies. We know you're up to the task.

And, Larry, if you're reading this, we have three words for you: IDEAS THAT FLY!!!

Thanks to Lisa Keene, our Herff Jones representative, for answering all our questions and, problems, and always bringing us endless amounts of donuts each visit. We also appreciate the hard work of John Bir and the rest of Giolas for taking event pictures and doing such a great job with the portraits. Also, a big thanks goes out to Larry Titak Photography for taking great sports team photos whenever we needed them.

Quiver Volume 37 "Three's A Crowd" was printed by Herff Jones, 6015 Travis Ln., Shawnee Mission, KS 66202-2342 with the assistance of Julie Bogart, Customer Service Adviser. The book had a press run of 1,650, featured on 100lb. Bordeaux paper. Early yearbook orders during registration cost $45, while the late, end of year orders ran $65.

All page layouts were created using Adobe Pagemaker 6.5 and Adobe Photoshop. Our staff photographers shot over 600 rolls of Fuji color 400 and 800 ASA film. Giolas Photography in Merrillville, IN, shot all underclass, senior, and group pictures.

Copy was in 10 point AHJ Garamond and captions were in 8 point Arial. Theme fonts included AHJ Antique Olive, AHJ Unitus, and AHJ Bodoni.

"There were so many things I loved about Steve that I can't just pick one. I don't think anyone can. Everyone loved him. How can you not? He was just a great person with an awesome personality and a big heart! I can't wait to see you again Steve!"

Melissa Engle (10)

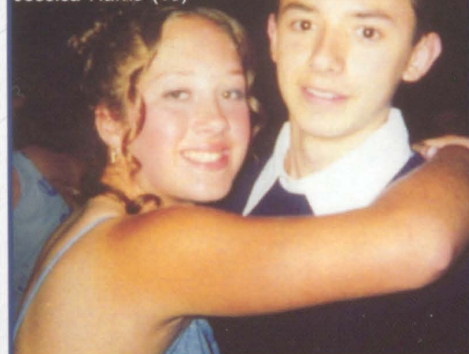

"Steve and I didn't talk that much before he passed away, but I saw him everyday in summer school and just seeing him made me happy. This has been really hard on everyone and accepting what happened to him has been the hardest part. I'll never forget how much he meant to all of us."

Mandi Arreola (10)

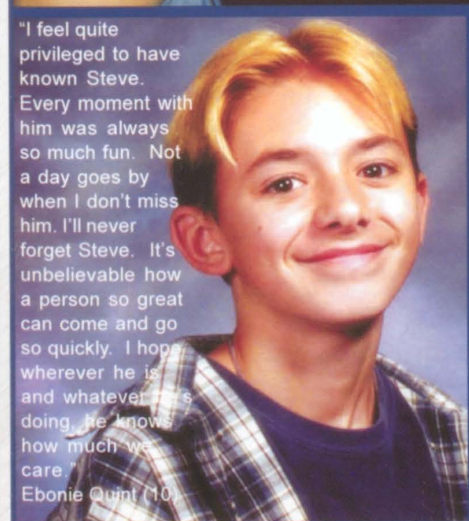

"I remember the first time I met Steve I thought to myself I'm already in love with this kid. I'll never love anybody the way i love him and theres not a second that goes by that I don't think of him. Steve, I can't wait until the day when I'm with you again."

Jessica Harris (10)

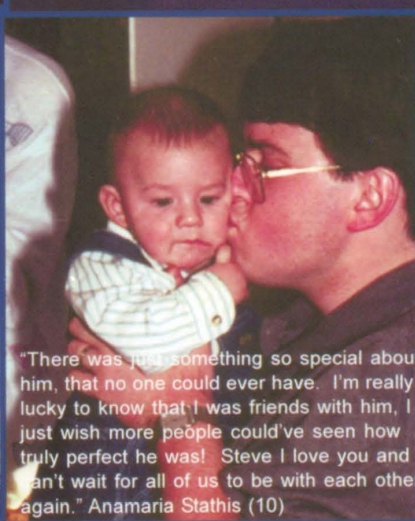

"Steve added much to my life. He cared about his friends, and always showed them a good time. Every time I was with Steve, I had a great time. This year will be much harder and longer without him."

Matt Kush (10)

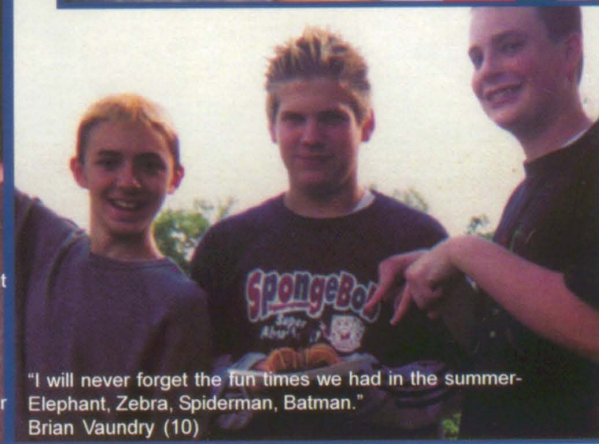

"I feel quite privileged to have known Steve. Every moment with him was always so much fun. Not a day goes by when I don't miss him. I'll never forget Steve. It's unbelievable how a person so great can come and go so quickly. I hope wherever he is and whatever he's doing, he knows how much we care."

Ebonie Quint (10)

"There was just something so special about him, that no one could ever have. I'm really lucky to know that I was friends with him, I just wish more people could've seen how truly perfect he was! Steve I love you and can't wait for all of us to be with each other again." Anamaria Stathis (10)

"I will never forget the fun times we had in the summer- Elephant, Zebra, Spiderman, Batman."

Christina Chakonas

March 19, 1985 - July 6, 2002

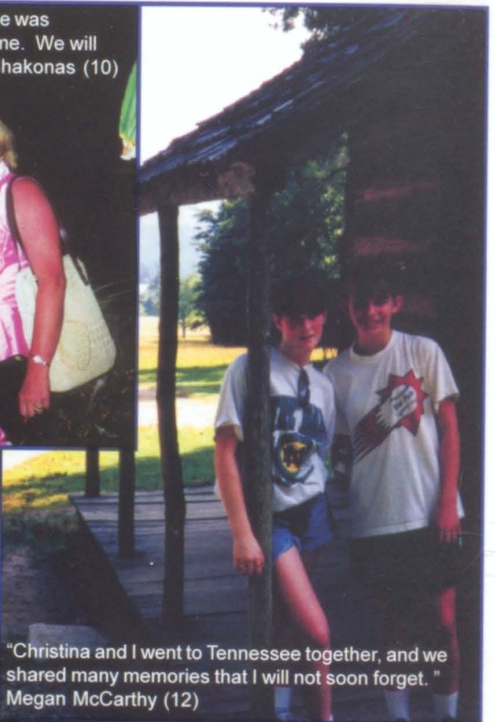

"Christina always had a crush on Ryan Cash, and anytime anyone would mention his name she would go, 'Cha ching.' She was a great friend and we shared many inside jokes." Lauren Kaptur (12)

"Christina loved her family, friends, and school. She was determined and outgoing with a big smile all the time. We will always love and miss her very much." Angela Chakonas (10)

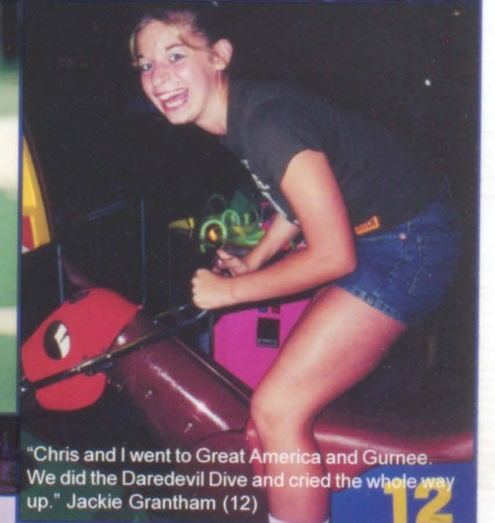

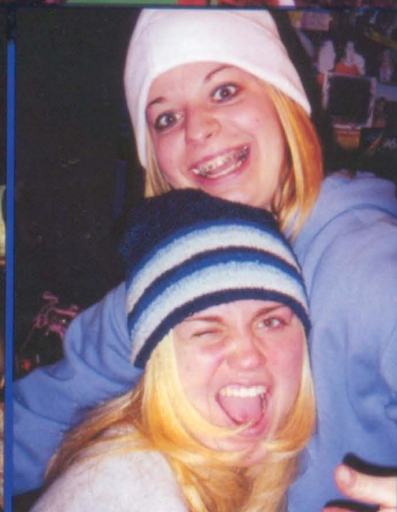

"I'll always remember Chris. Don't forget about your blanket and our sleepovers." Robyn Nowacki (12)

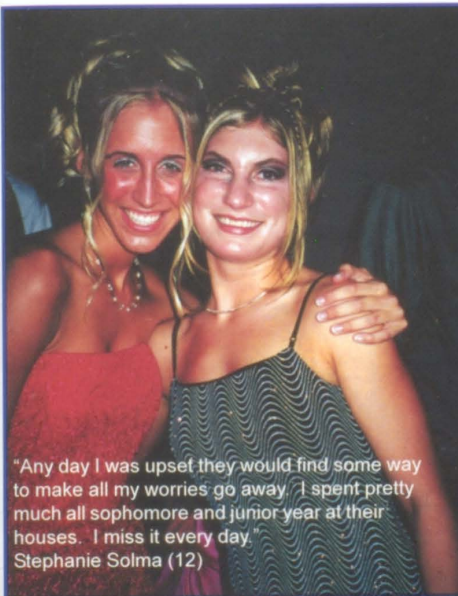

"Christina and I went to Tennessee together, and we shared many memories that I will not soon forget." Megan McCarthy (12)

"Christina was one of my best friends and there isn't a day that goes by when I don't think about her. She could always make me smile no matter what. Chris had the best personality." Carrie Alb (12)

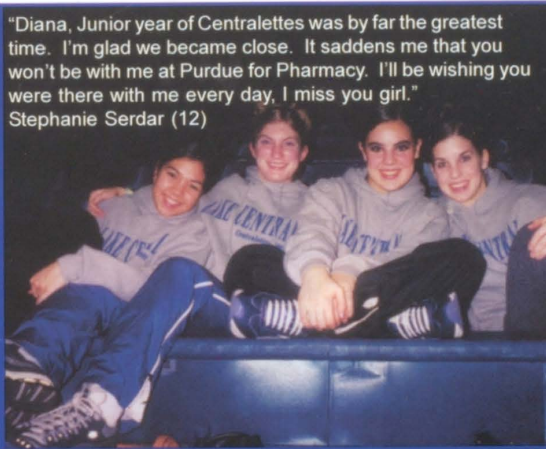

"Chris and I went to Great America and Gurnee. We did the Daredevil Dive and cried the whole way up." Jackie Grantham (12)

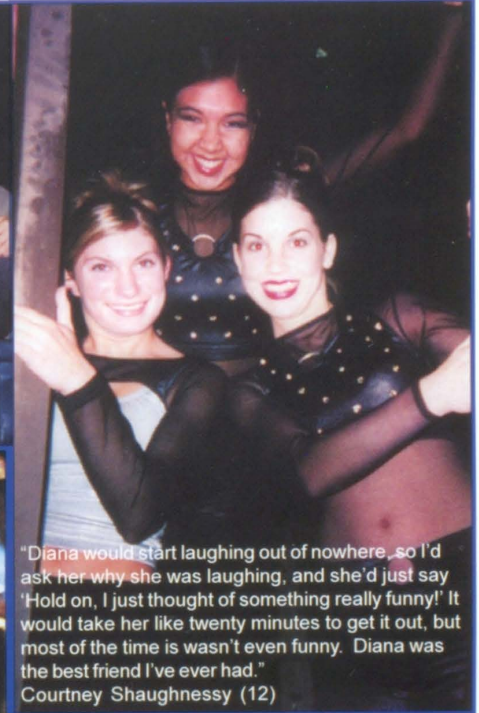

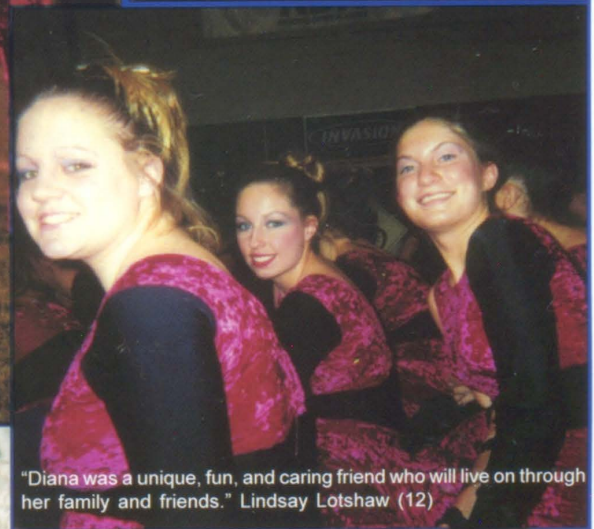

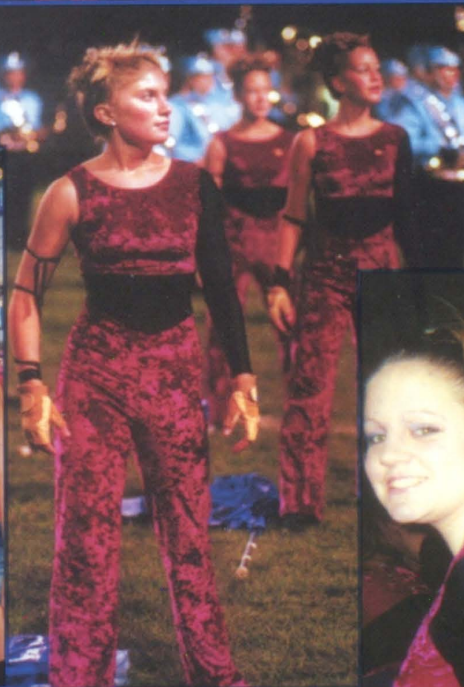

"Any day I was upset they would find some way to make all my worries go away. I spent pretty much all sophomore and junior year at their houses. I miss it every day."
Stephanie Solma (12)

"Diana, Junior year of Centralettes was by far the greatest time. I'm glad we became close. It saddens me that you won't be with me at Purdue for Pharmacy. I'll be wishing you were there with me every day. I miss you girl."
Stephanie Serdar (12)

"Diana would start laughing out of nowhere, so I'd ask her why she was laughing, and she'd just say 'Hold on, I just thought of something really funny!' It would take her like twenty minutes to get it out, but most of the time it wasn't even funny. Diana was the best friend I've ever had."
Courtney Shaughnessy (12)

"Diana was a unique, fun, and caring friend who will live on through her family and friends."
Lindsay Lotshaw (12)

"If I hadn't made the team freshman year I never would have been such great friends with Chris or Diana. It was a blessing to have friends like them and I am grateful to have had the opportunity to dance with them and get to know them through Centralettes."
Megan Towe (12)

"I will never forget the night after the beach with Di. We stayed up all night running around and eating everything in Steph's house."

Beating the CROWD

With two more semesters of high school out of the way, students looked back on the events and activities that crowded their lives during the year. Many would remember this year as one of many changes. In the course of 180 days, students had seen the beginning and end of a war. They had witnessed the effects of corporation-wide budget cuts as 56 jobs were eliminated and endured more congestion in S-hall as the field house was closed for extensive renovations.

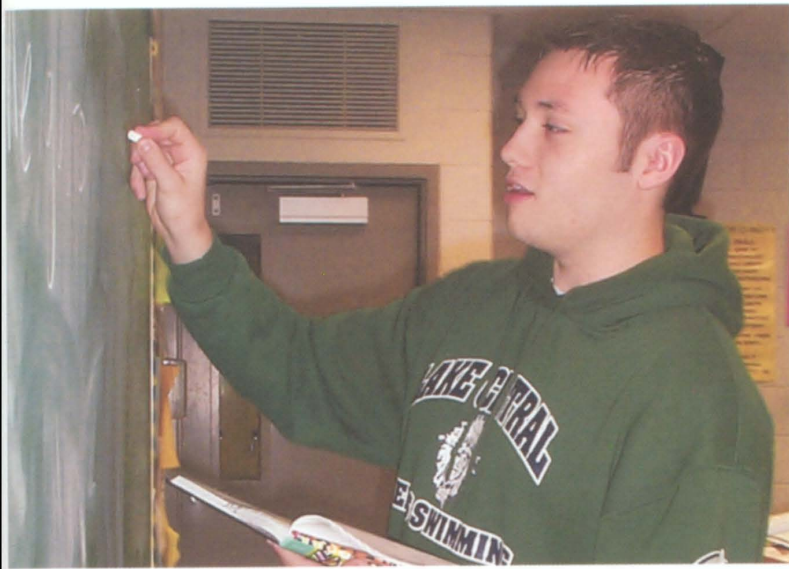

In the midst of all the transition, each member of the crowd was left with memories that could bring a smile to his or her face. Seniors could laugh at the disco-fabulous outfits they wore to Senior Banquet. Juniors could savor the first time an underclassman stepped aside for them in the hallway. Sophomores could grin at the memory of passing their driving test, and freshmen could sigh in relief that their first year of high school was now behind them.

Nikki Flores (10) practices after school for Science Olympiad. The team placed third in regionals in their Sound of Music event.

Brad Cook (10), a member of the percussion ensemble, plays the xylophone at the Valentine Concert.

Brian Fertig (12) teaches Miss Laskey's Spanish 5 Honors class irregular verbs for their final. Each student was given a area in Spanish to teach the class.

Prior to the Colts vs. Titans football game, Kelli Brady (11), whose father is a sports agent, makes a shirt for Justin McCareins, a Tennessee Titan.

How did you make it through the crowds?

"I tried to be my own person, not the person everyone else expected me to be."
Mandi Goodwin (12)

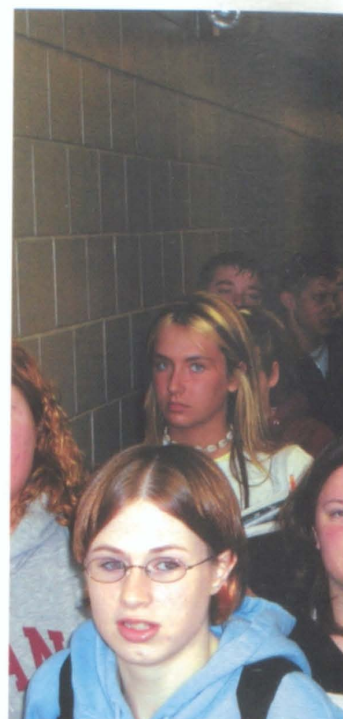

"To better my chances for a successful school year, I widened my group of friends."
Jimmy Mavraganes (10)

"I started out with one group of friends, and by the end of the year I moved to a different group."
Bart Strickland (9)

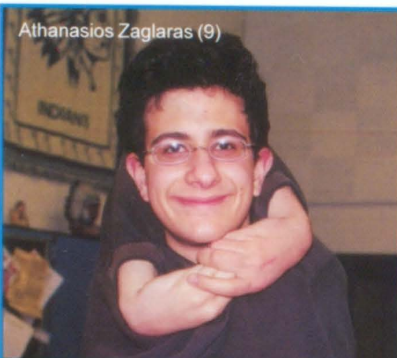

"I've had the same group of best friends since freshman year; we call ourselves 'The Five.'"

Students crowd into S-hall due to the gym construction. A day later, teachers were assigned to direct traffic in order to put an end to the insanity.

Megan Johnson, Meagan Ramsey, Stephanie Alexander, and Angela Fata (all 11) look over Lake Monroe after a night of camping there after Prom.

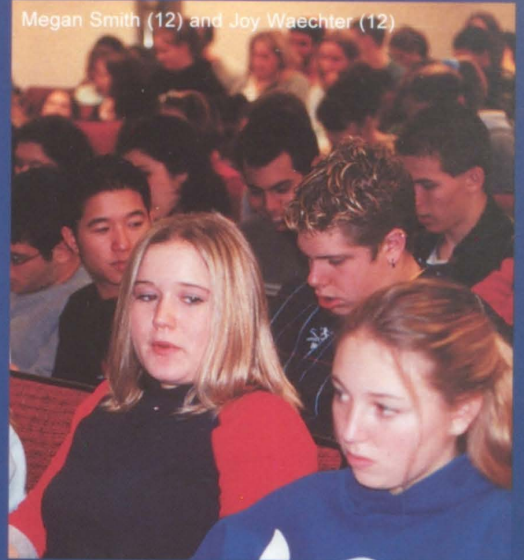

As students began their summers, they swore that they would never miss the packed hallways and long lunch lines that sometimes seemed to dominate the school's atmosphere. They looked forward to tossing their ID cards into the trash and embracing their individuality for a few precious months. But, as most Indians came to realize, they did not need a summer away from their 2,616 schoolmates to become individuals. They already were.

Whether it was singing a solo at a choir concert, competing in the state tournament, sharing an opinion in the newspaper, painting a self-portrait, or collecting money for a charity, each and every student had found a unique way to stand out from the rest of the crowd. As hundreds of students from three towns pushed their way out of the school one last time, they saw how lucky they were that

THE WAR ON TERRORISM

Over the course of the year, the world's attention focused on a chain of tumultuous terrorist events. In Afghanistan, the Taliban regime fell from power as U.S. troops crippled the al-Qaeda network and cleared caves in search of Osama bin Laden. World-wide, civilians and military personnel fell victim to terrorist bombs and acts of hatred. On the home front, "bioterrorism" became a common term after it was revealed that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was producing biological weapons. Hussein's defiance of United Nations imposed sanctions prompted the United States to seek world support of military action against Iraq. Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization wrestled over conflicting opinions on the issue, while North Korean leader Kim Jong Il threatened to deploy nuclear weapons if Iraq was attacked. As tensions rose among political leaders, the world watched and waited to see what the next chapter in "The War on Terrorism" would bring.
